12 Families Homeless In Esquimalt Inferno

At least 12 families are homeless after fire swept through an Esquimalt apartment block Wednesday night causing damage that could reach as high as $500,000.

Esquimalt firemen were still at the scene this morning mopping up and trying to determine the cause of the fire that gutted the three-storey centre block of the 35-unit Gorge Vale Garden Apartments at 1180-1182 Colville.

Crews from Dockyard and Victoria fire departments were called in to assist Esquimalt firefighters in putting out the fire which broke out in a basement locker room at about 8:40 p.m. and spread through the walls into the roof.

Dockyard firefighter Ray Nicoletti was the only casualty. He received cuts to his hand and burns to his neck and was treated at the scene.

All tenants got out safely but an unidentified elderly man had to be rescued from a third-floor balcony by firemen with ladders.

Esquimalt police Sgt. Jack Wright said the man had apparently left the building at the first sound of the alarm but then, apparently thinking the fire was of little consequence, returned to his room to watch television.

Cedric Steele of Cedric Steele Realty Ltd., which bought the apartment only last November, said he is attempting to locate the tenants to find out if they had insurance on their belongings and to assist in making alternate housing arrangements for them.

"All I can say is I'm glad everyone got out safely," he said.

Steele said 12 suites were gutted and extensive water damage was done to a number of suites in the basement.

Esquimalt police put the loss at $300,000 but Steele said the figure could go as high as $500,000 taking into account the replacement cost of contents consumed in the blaze.

Wright said dense smoke intially hampered firemen from reaching the source of the fire. Flames quickly spread through the walls, jumped a fire guard down the centre of the building and found its way under the roof.

Ten off-duty Esquimalt policemen, who double as firemen in the municipality, were called in to supplement the five members on shift. The Dockyard sent eight firemen in two trucks and the Victoria fire department supplied a pumper truck and crew since the Esquimalt pumper is awaiting repairs.

Only this week Esquimalt council authorized spending $4,000 to repair the truck.

Troops Set On Vietnam Borders, Teng Warns

By DON OBERDORFER
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping confirmed Wednesday that China has moved troops to its border with Vietnam and suggested it might be necessary to teach the Vietnamese "some necessary lessons."

Teng's statement at a luncheon meeting with reporters, on his final day in Washington before embarking on a four-day national tour, was the strongest hint so far that China might bring its newly augmented force of 10 to 12 divisions and close to 150 warplanes in the border region into action against the Hanoi regime.

United States officials are deeply concerned about the possibility that war in Asia could spread from the Vietnam-Cambodia clash in Indochina to involve Chinese forces themselves and perhaps even the Soviet Union in retaliation. In recent days the United States repeatedly advised the Soviet Union, China and Vietnam against widening the already-dangerous Indochina conflict.

Confirming that there have been "necessary troop movements" of Chinese forces, Teng said "we will have to wait and see" what action might be taken. He emphasized that Chinese "mean what we say" and that they "do not act rashly."

He added that "it just won't do" not to teach "some necessary lessons" to such international forces as the Cubans and the Vietnamese. He called the latter "the Cubans of the Orient." He charged that Cubans are "running rampant" in Africa and that Vietnamese will do even worse in Asia unless restrained.

In addition to the hard talk against the Soviet Union and its allies, Teng's final day in Washington included a White House ceremony for the signing of science and technology, cultural and consular agreements, and a warm public send-off from President Carter.

"We have charted a new and irreversible course toward a firmer, more constructive and more hopeful relationship," Carter said. While saying that Washington and Peking "share many common perspectives," he was careful to add, perhaps with an eye to the Soviets, that "the security concerns of the United States do not coincide completely with those of China, nor does China share our responsibilities."

Backed by the red-starred People's Republic of China flag and the Stars and Stripes at a table beside Teng, Carter announced to some 240 guests that United States consulates will open soon in Shanghai and Canton, and that the Chinese will establish consulates in Houston and San Francisco.

Triumph for Khomeini

TEHRAN (UPI) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini returned home today in triumph and threatened to arrest army-backed Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar unless he resigns — a move Western observers said brought Iran closer to civil war.

The 78-year-old holy man announced his determination to set up a "pure" Islamic republic in place of the Bakhtiar government and appealed to the army — still loyal to Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi — to join his revolution.

Khomeini unleashed a blistering attack on the United States and pledged to drive out of Iran the foreigners he accused of plundering Iranian oil.

"I beg to God to cut the hands off all those foreign advisers and helpers in Iran," he told hundreds of thousands of supporters at Tehran's main cemetery where 1,500 victims of army shooting during 14 months of Khomeini-led insurrection are buried.

His statement was an obvious reference to the 40,000 U.S. advisers and oil workers in Iran before they began a mass exodus late in 1978. The symbolic cutting off of their hands harkened back to other Islamic republics where thieves were punished by having their hands cut off.

"Parliament and the government are illegal," he said. "If they continue we will arrest them and I will shut their mouths. I will appoint a government with the support of the people."

Khomeini has said he will name a revolutionary council — probably Saturday — to run the country and eventually establish a "pure" Islamic state.

Mac-Blo Earnings Jump $40.2M

VANCOUVER (CP) — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., Canada's largest forest products firm, Wednesday announced highest-ever net earnings of $100.9 million, or $4.50 a share, before extraordinary items for the year ending last Dec. 31. The amount was up from $60.7 million or $2.70 a share in 1977.

Sales and other income for 1978 rose to more than $2 billion, an increase of $300 million over 1977.

Meanwhile, International Woodworkers of America spokesman Jack Munro said that because of the forest industry's healthy profit picture, the union will seek substantial across-the-board increases when its contract expires in June.

76% OPPOSE QUEBEC RIFT

Times News Services

Canadians outside Quebec are 76 per cent opposed to Quebec separation, and 67 per cent opposed to any form of sovereignty-association with an independent Quebec, a Gallup poll shows.

The poll, released Wednesday, said 19 per cent of Quebecers would vote to separate from Canada and 46 per cent favor some form of sovereignty-association.

Over-all, 59 per cent of all Canadians surveyed oppose the idea of sovereignty-association with Quebec and 27 per cent are in favor. 14 per cent had no response or were undecided.

Adults surveyed across Canada were asked earlier this month how they would vote if a national referendum on Quebec's status were held at the time of the federal election expected this year.

On the separation issue, 19 per cent of those polled in Quebec said they would support separation while 64 per cent said they would oppose it and 17 per cent did not know.

In the rest of Canada, 15 per cent said they favored separation, 76 per cent were opposed and the rest had no opinion.

Forty-six per cent of Quebecers quizzed on sovereignty-association said they would favor it, 39 per cent were opposed and 15 per cent were undecided.

Elsewhere in Canada, 20 per cent said they would vote for sovereignty-association and 67 per cent said they were opposed. Thirteen per cent were undecided.

$7.5M Grant For Welfare

The provincial government today announced a $7.5 million grant to help municipalities keep their share of welfare cost increases to a minimum.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said the additional provincial contribution will alllow municipalities to hold their share of increased social assistance costs to five per cent in the upcoming fiscal year.

The government made the move because welfare costs will increase more than five per cent this year although all municipalities have been ordered to limit their overall budget increases to a maximum of five per cent.

Wolfe stressed the additional $7.5 million is a one-shot grant for the 1979-80 fiscal year.

Municipalities will be assessed $1.06 monthly per capita for the next fiscal year.

However, the government projects a more realistic assessment would be $1.40. The additional funds will cover that difference.

Last year municipalities were assessed $1.01.

Wolfe blamed federal government cutbacks in unemployment insurance coverage as one of the factors in the increased costs for welfare.

By Wolfe's calculations Victoria will save $255,000 as a result of the grant.

Meanwhile, Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy has issued an appeal to B.C.'s top 150 businesses to hire welfare recipients.

Mrs. McCarthy said there are 18,000 welfare recipients under age 30 and urged: "Give those less fortunate a bit of a lift up the ladder."

She said the spending of more and more money is not going to turn the welfare cycle around.

She said she is calling on the business community to teach the less fortunate new skills, to be patient with them and perhaps to give them a better opportunity.

Asked if the government will provide incentives for business, the minister replied that might be a possibility in the future.

$8M Job for Yarrows

The Victoria division of Burrard Yarrows Corporation has landed a contract for about $8 million with Dome Petroleum that will guarantee 350 jobs for a three-month period this year.

General manager Don Challinor said today the drilling ship, Dalmahoy, now in Singapore, will arrive around March 20 and work will begin immediately to make the ship suitable for work in the Arctic.

The ship will be renamed the Canmar Explorer IV.

The conversion will be similar to that carried out by the shipyard on the Havdrill in 1976.

Challinor said two shifts will be employed on the Dalmahoy during the conversion.

The vessel will be in the Arctic for the 1979 drilling season.

Challinor said the Dome Petroleum contract guarantees 350 jobs that might not have been available otherwise.

There are currently close to 500 people employed in the shipyard.

Child Credit Tax Weapon

OTTAWA (CP) — The government plans to use the child tax credit plan to collect back taxes owed by some parents.

The government has the power to withhold part or all of the tax credit from a parent who owes taxes from previous years, a tax official said Wednesday.

However, the credit cannot be withheld from a mother if it is the father who owes the taxes. The policy states that the credit can be withheld only if the person claiming the credit owes the back taxes.

The credit can be claimed by most family allowance recipients. In all but a few cases that is mothers, not fathers.

The policy was explained in an interview after Newfoundland Senator Jack Marshall said a mother in his constituency has been told she will not get her $400 child tax credit rebate because her husband owes taxes from last year.

The revenue official here said the woman should not be penalized because her husband owes the tax. She said the case would be looked into.

Meanwhile, Revenue Minister Tony Abbott said the government has assembled an army of experts to help untie some of the confusing red tape resulting from the child tax credit plan.

But he added that opposition MPs should stop bellyaching about the complicated income tax forms 1.5 million mothers will have to fill out and get out and help them do it.

Abbott, who first disputed Conservative MP James McGrath's claims that the one-page form was unduly complex, later said "I do not deny . . . that women who are faced with filling out forms for the first time may find it burdensome."

McGrath quoted from the form's instructions:

"Subtract line seven from line one to arrive at your Child Tax Credit on line eight. If line seven is greater than line one, you are not entitled to a Child Tax Credit. Transfer your credit to line 78 on page four of your return.

"I do not even think the minister himself could understand that bureaucratic gobbledegook."

Storms Cripple California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rain, tornadoes and golf-ball-size hail whipped and battered southern California, damaging homes and businesses and paralysing several communities, while a rare snowfall stunned residents of others.

Elsewhere, snow fell in several states and bitterly cold temperatures were reported in the northern U.S. plains.

In San Diego, where more than six centimetres of rain fell, dozens of persons were rescued from their flooded homes and stranded cars. Nearby National City recorded about 12 centmintres of rain in a 24-hour period.

San Diego police were searching today for a man who was swept away by floodwaters Wednesday as he tried to clear a storm drain near his home. And Mexican authorities said a Tijuana woman drowned when she fell into a rain-swollen drainage ditch.

Interstate 5, the main artery linking northern and southern California, was blocked by snow north of Los Angeles for the second straight day and avalanches were reported in the Angeles National Forest.

A tornado caused $1 million damage to two Universal City Studios movie sets depicting New York City and a Chinatown.

In Orange County, tornadoes accompanied by huge hailstones broke windows, lifted roofs off houses, overturned cars and tossed 300-pound trash bins about the streets.

Twisters that roared through Anaheim and Santa Ana uprooted trees, flipped cars and caused damage to several businesses, police said.

Floodwaters carried away some mobile homes and submerged others, trapping at least two people for hours Wednesday.

Palm Springs was virtually isolated with roads hidden under as much as 60 centimetres of snow — the first snow to fall in five years and the first on the ground since 1949.

Hundreds who fled the bad weather lined up at Palm Springs Airport for tickets, but all flights were cancelled.

FROG SONG NO WORRY

Premier Bill Benntt said today he won't be embarrassed by Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm's froggie-from-the-east song when he goes to Ottawa next week for a constitutional conference.

Vander Zalm's song, in which he refers to Quebec Premier Rene Levesque as the frog from the east, has caused a ripple across the country.

"I'm always willing to be accountable for my own language and conduct and at the first ministers' conferences," Bennett said.

U.K. Strikers Hit Hospital For Children

LONDON (UPI) — Public service unions, vowing to intensify "guerrilla actions" in their battle for higher pay, hit Britain's largest children's hospital with a four-hour strike of porters and kitchen staff today.

A union spokesman warned there will be more strikes "at five minutes notice."

Social Services Secretary David Ennals said a 1½-hour meeting with union officials Wednesday night gave him no hope of an early end to the hospital crisis caused by strikes, boycotts and go-slow actions in 1,100 of the country's 2,300 government hospitals.

Throughout Britain, garbage was piled high on sidewalks, streets were left uncleaned, nearly 1,500 schools were closed and water supplies were threatened.

The latest crisis in three weeks of bitter industrial action came from the Public Services Union, demanding a basic weekly wage of $120, which amounts to an increase of 45 per cent for some of its 1.5 million workers.

Union officials, angered at the government's refusal to increase its 5 per cent pay offer, instructed members Wednesday night to heighten the "guerrilla actions."

In Liverpool 35 striking gravediggers defied a union ruling that their action should not last beyond a week and city officials were forced to store 200 embalmed bodies in a vacant factory and considered burying them at sea.

Papers Ban Stripper Item

TORONTO (CP) — Six Canadian newspapers have decided not to carry this Saturday's edition of Weekend Magazine which contains two stories about striptease.

Lewis Louthood, Weekend publisher, said Wednesday publishers for the newspapers — Lethbridge Herald, Kingston Whig-Standard, Windsor Star, Kitchener-Waterloo Record, Brantford Expositor and St. Catharines Standard — have said they regard the articles as being in bad taste.

When the magazine was redesigned last year, a policy was established to deal with more subjects that are relevant to today's society, Louthood said.

"We are not doing it to be sensational, but to be interesting and readable."

Weekend Magazine, printed in Montreal and with editorial offices in Toronto, is included in the Saturday edition of 21 daily newspapers in Canada, including the Victoria Times.

Colin McCullough, publisher of the Times, said today certain portions of the articles are in poor taste and he had informed the publisher of the magazine of this.

"Unfortunately," McCullough said, "we are not able to edit the article and our only recourse would be not to distribute the magazine. This would deprive readers of the opportunity to read other articles, including one about Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney. I don't think this would be fair to our subscribers, whom I consider mature and intelligent."

John Macfarlane, Weekend editor, said that one of the articles, a four-page story called 50 Years of Strip-Tease and which includes about 15 pictures, concludes that the sexual revolution of the 1960s killed strip-tease.

The other story is about American stripper Sally Rand, who at 75 still is working.

Sock-Saving SIN

OTTAWA (CP) — There's nothing like SIN to keep thousands of teen-age athletes from losing their socks, shoes and bags, the organizers of the Canada Winter Games in Brandon, Man., have decided.

Sport Minister Iona Campagnolo told the Commons Wednesday the athletes going to Brandon have been asked for their SIN (social insurance numbers) "so the things they bring with them will not be lost."

Saskatchewan Conservative Ray Hnatyshyn said it appeared the request to the athletes is "another attempt to build up social insurance numbers as an identifying number in government generally."

But Mrs. Campagnolo said organizers want "to keep good track of who is at the Games and where they are to keep the numbers straight."

Hnatyshyn has repeatedly criticized the government for using SIN for a number of functions unrelated to the two uses which Parliament authorized the numbers — social insunce payments and income tax collections.

The winter games, held every four years, bring together top athletes from the 10 provinces and two territories in a variety of indoor and outdoor sports.

Patty...hamming it up for camera prior to release from jail

Now Free as a Bird, Patty Leaves Prison

Times News Services

PLEASANTON, Calif. — Patricia Hearst walked out of prison into bright sunshine this morning on the arm of her lawyer, a free woman after a five-year odyssey of kidnap, crime and punishment.

Miss Hearst was met at the prison by lawyer George Martinez and her fiance, police officer Bernard Shaw, while a strengthened security force patrolled the area and a California Highway Patrol helicopter hovered overhead.

Miss Hearst, halting briefly to talk to reporters, held her commutation papers high over her head and thanked her parents, her sisters, the people on the committee which worked for her freedom, her lawyer and her boyfriend.

She told reporters she was going on a trip, but would not say where or when. Then she climbed into the back seat of a station wagon between Martinez and Shaw and drove away. In front were two bodyguards and Ingrid Martinez, wife of Miss Hearst's lawyer.

Beaming and composed, the 24-year-old newspaper heiress stepped from the campus-like medium security prison and said:

"I'm glad to be going home. I want to thank my parents and all the other people on the committee to release me, and this is what we worked so hard to get."

She had served 22 months, 2 weeks and 4 days of a seven-year conviction for taking part in the SLA-engineered robbery of a San Francisco bank in which two bystanders were wounded.

After a few weeks of adjustment, Miss Hearst wants to do volunteer work with a women's rights organization in the area of rape, work with victims of mind control and perhaps train dogs. Eventually, she hopes to have children.

Miss Hearst's last day at the federal medium-security prison at Pleasanton was spent signing release papers and getting her personal property in order. She spent her final night in an isolated prison hospital room at her own request.

New Study Overturns Tobacco Men's Claim

BOSTON (AP) — An 11-year study of 4,004 people has failed to find any support for the tobacco industry's argument that smokers die younger because of some hidden weakness other than cigarettes, researchers say.

Tobacco industry supporters, among others, have said that smokers may have a higher death rate than non-smokers because of unidentified genetic or environmental differences, not the cigarettes themselves.

"We set about to try to test that idea by looking at as many characteristics as we could of smokers as compared to non-smokers," said Gary Friedman, who directed the study. "We wanted to see if they could explain the relationship that we found between smoking and mortality, and they did not."

The researchers kept track of 4,004 middle-aged men and women for 11 years. They found that overall, the death rate among the smokers was 2.6 times higher than among non-smokers.

The researchers took into consideration 48 characteristics involving jobs, health and personalities. Among these were alcohol consumption, blood pressure, occupational exposure to chemicals, use of sleeping pills and complaints of insomnia and depression.

"None of them explained away the smoking-mortality relationship," Friedman said in an interview.

Ban on Sunday Gas Looming for U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. government officials, faced with continuing shortages of Iranian crude oil, are considering a ban on Sunday gasoline sales and other measures reminiscent of the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo.

Energy Secretary James Schlesinger said Wednesday the Carter administration will decide by April 1 whether to impose mandatory conservation measures. But he said such actions would not be needed if the public voluntarily saves fuel.

Measures that might be taken include allocating gasoline from refineries to distributors, suspending evening and Sunday sales or limiting motorists' purchases to alternate days, government officials said.

They said direct rationing has been ruled out.

So far, Schlesinger said, "the position of the U.S. has not been dramatically affected" by the upheaval in Iran which forced the shah to leave that country. The virtual shutoff of oil exports from Iran "is just beginning to bind now," he said.

The United States normally receives about five per cent of its crude oil from Iran.

Other oil-producing countries, most notably Saudi Arabia, have made up for much of the Iranian loss. But there have been reports the Saudis would produce an average of only 9.5 million barrels a day in the first four months of 1979. The normal daily average is nearly 10.5 million barrels.

In a related development, Exxon Corp. announced Wednesday it is reducing supplies of crude oil to customers by 10 per cent.

A Little Sneeze From Baker...

BELLINGHAM (AP) — Mount Baker sneezed Wednesday, sending a spout of steam 1,500 feet into the air, says a Western Washington University geologist.

Dr. Don Easterbrook, a geology professor and close observer of the volcanic mountain, said the reason for the increased heat flow is uncertain.

He described the mountain as "doing one of its huffs."

"It's like sneezing and trying to determine whether you have the flu or just a little dust," Easterbrook said. "The mountain is sneezing."

Just Not Funny

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm has again found himself in the political soup over his comments about French-Canadians. This time the problem is a piece of doggerel Vander Zalm wrote and sang — to the tune of On Top of Old Smokey — at a Social Credit convention.

The words of the song that originally inspired criticism were some ad-libbed lines reading "He (Prime Minister Trudeau) needed distraction/ A political fog/ And out of the East/ Came the sound of a frog," in a direct reference to Quebec Premier Rene Levesque.

But even without the new lines, the song contains some verses that our French-speaking countrymen would hardly regard as complimentary. For example: "Bilingual the key word/ French is what it takes/ You'll get your lessons/ From a box of cornflakes./ It cost us millions/ The east blew its nest/ Trudeau said 'Forget it/ We'll take from the west.'"

Vander Zalm's view of the whole thing is that it was nothing more than a joke and wasn't to be taken seriously. That explanation would be more easily accepted, however, if one ignored his past comments about Quebec and the Quebecois.

Few British Columbians and fewer French-Canadians have forgotten that the day after the election of Levesque's separatist government, Vander Zalm said he wouldn't lose any sleep if Quebec did decide to separate from the rest of Canada, that the separation might save B.C. money, and that anyway, it might mean we wouldn't have to have those bilingual cornflakes boxes. Even before that Vander Zalm once warned that dozens of transients were flocking to B.C. from Quebec to take advantage of our great welfare system.

With that history, it's little wonder that B.C.'s French-Canadians don't find the joke particularly funny. Vander Zalm says that perhaps they've never heard the term "frog" used in a friendly way before. However, his previous comments would hardly make them think he feels friendly towards them.

In any case, the epithet "frog" has been used so many times in a derogatory sense towards the French that it can't suddenly be accepted by them as an amusing or friendly term.

With his song, as with his other Quebec comments, Vander Zalm has displayed an insensitivity to the feelings of French-Canadians at a time when sensitivity is desperately needed. It just wasn't funny.

"... Harold, it's someone from the post office ... says we sent five registered letters last year and that makes us eligible for their registered special this week ... two for $3 ... are you interested? ..."

A Landmark for Melbourne

Not many cities have deliberately embarked on a search for a manmade landmark to make them famous around the world, but that's what the city of Melbourne is doing. If you've any ideas, drop city hall a line down under.

With that peculiarly Australian enthusiasm for oddball ideas, former lord mayor Ronald Walker recently announced that the city is looking for something that might eclipse the pyramids of Egypt as a famous symbol.

Now, there is little in Melbourne that is instantly recognizable. Aficionados of garish architecture are fond of the city's war memorial, and its "toast rack" trams are a cute anachronism — but they just don't rank with the monuments of the pharoahs for international image-building. Asked to think of some manmade Australian landmark, either the Sydney harbor bridge or its famous (and expensive) opera house pops into the average person's mind. Melbourne has nothing that captures the imagination.

Melbourne is serious about its quest. A prize of $100,000 has been put up for the successful design, and Walker says it needn't be anything fancy. An idea, a bare conception of a dream is what Melbourne wants. The nuts and bolts of erecting the thing will be left to professionals.

Money is no object. The state of Victoria is underwriting the project, which will be built above 80 acres of railway yards in the centre of Melbourne, to coincide with Australia's bicentennial in a decade.

"The Eiffel Tower will always be there, the pyramids will always be there. Our landmark will be like that. It will be something unique that will last for ages."

As a country familiar withsearches for symbols of national identity, we ought to warn Melbourne that the quest is fraught with peril. Montreal built a magnificent stadium for the Olympics, and we're still arguing about who's paying the $1 billion-plus bill. Our flag took years of pain and agony to produce and still some people don't like it.

CN built a gigantic communications tower, the tallest freestanding et cetera in the world, which immediately became flat Toronto's new mascot. But has it made Cabbagetown any more loved by the rest of Canada? You've been warned, Melbourne.

RICHARD GWYN

A Populist Foreign Policy

TORONTO — To get it right took six drafts, the last five of them written by Joe Clark in a six-hour stint in his hotel room burning up time that, usually, political leaders can put to far better use.

Clark's effort justified itself. In his speech to the one-day conference on foreign affairs, organized at a hotel here by the Conservative party, Clark displayed neither great profundities nor exceptional insights. Instead, he showed a feel for the subject. And, not a new trait this, an aptitude for deft phrases.

Such as his warning why Canadians should not turn their backs in impatience on organizations like the United Nations: "We must not despair at finding ourselves at the tyranny of a majority which happens not to be our majority."

Or his description of a development project he had visited in an Indian village. "It has given the people a sense of efficacy."

Cultivate Interest

Or, most persuasively, in Clark's insistence that Canada's real diplomatic challenge now is to "cultivate the latest Canadian interest in the world."

During the "brilliant," postwar era of Canadian diplomacy, those in charge, like the late Lester Pearson, had enjoyed "the luxury of operating at some distance from public opinion," Clark said. Canada's diplomatic initiatives in the 1940s and 1950s, "did not seem to cost Canadians too much."

Today, though, Clark continued, world events, "cut closer to Canadian interests." Unless public support was mobilized, any initiatives in foreign policy would be stillborn. "World issues are becoming local, economic and menacing," said Clark. "The challenge is to make them, for Canadians, local, economic and promising."

Clark's analysis impressed his audience of academics, foreign diplomats and representatives of international organizations with names that sound as if they'd been scooped out of a bowl of alphabet soup. Yet the group numbered no more than 100. Why so much effort for so few?

To politicians these days, foreign policy is a downer. The public could care less about it. We've turned inward, away from broad causes to our own immediate concerns. As one handy barometer of the collapse of public interest in foreign news, Canadian Press, the national news agency, has cut the staff of its London bureau from six to one in the past decade and last fall closed its Paris bureau.

Yet we still have, many of us, an international itch. A tick of conscience. Call it, if you want to be glib, Boy Scoutism, or, if to be accurate, a sense of incompleteness that comes naturally to people living on the rim of the civilized world. We feel a need to be part of some larger whole. Anyway, many of us came here recently, and still glance back.

JOE CLARK

As well, there is the memory, beginning now to fade, of that incredible decade and a half after the Second World War, when an extraordinary band of Canadian diplomats (nobody then called them bureaucrats) led by Pearson made us count for something, in the eyes of others and thus in our own eyes. In part, we still measure our own self esteeem by the esteem in which the world measures our leaders.

In substance, Prime Minister Trudeau has accomplished little in foreign policy. His most substantive initiative, the "third option" of lessening dependence on the U.S., has died with a whimper. Its effect, aside from briefly irritating the U.S., has been actually to increase our dependence upon the U.S. — 75 per cent of our exports go south today compared to 65 per cent five years ago.

Yet by his style, Trudeau has raised our self esteem. West Germany's Helmust Schmidt is his friend. So is Cuba's Fidel Castro. To U.S. Vice-President Walter Mondale, he is "a priceless asset of the industrialized world."

By his tour to Tokyo, New Delhi, Tel Aviv and Amman, Clark gambled that he could, if not compete directly, at least close the gap between himself and Trudeau. Instead he lost ground — interestingly, not in the eyes of the diplomatic community (several diplomats at the conference told me they were "bewildered" by the press coverage of Clark's tour), but in the eyes of the reporters who accompanied Clark and hence in the eyes of the voters.

Distinctive Style

Yet Clark has begun to display the beginnings at least of a distinctive foreign policy style. Its starting point is the public. "Canadians must have a sense of participation in foreign policy." The public is its concluding point. "Our foreign policy has to be effective, but it has to be as well a source of pride to us."

A populist foreign policy is something we've never attempted before. It's a style that comes naturally to Clark. He described his visit to an Indian village and how it changed his views about foreign aid. "To none of you will any of this be new. It is new, though, to many Canadians. It was to me, and it's to those who don't know about it that the case for development aid has to be made."

Cut Back Arms

Recent articles in the press have said that because the USSR is increasing its defence forces then NATO should also.

A recent statement by the new West German minister of defence is interesting in that he says NATO should reduce its forces. He was too young to have been in the war so can take an objective view.

It is generally agreed that the world's economic troubles stem from continuous deficit financing, the main item of which is the ruinous arms race. In order to reverse this trend somebody must take the risk of a new initiative. Actually the risk is minimal because a war between the super powers is unlikely in view of the nuclear threat.

President Carter wishes to reduce defence spending substantially but is prevented by the dinosaurs in congress. — H. S. Thuillier, 2424 Beach Drive.

What Brand?

After reading such a detailed "carte gastronomique" as appeared in your paper (Top Flight for His Holiness, Jan. 25) one could even begin wondering about the quality and brand of toilet paper that the pope is using.

This clearly indicates the continuing saga dating from the Middle Ages of the well-known proverb: "As many camels could go through the eye of a needle as rich men go to Heaven." — Henry J. Szmuniewski, Malahat P.O.

Take It Over

I wish to comment on the actions taken by Premier Bennett on the takeover bids in the lumber industry which have arisen as a result of intercorporate manoeuvring between MacBlo, Domtar, and Canadian Pacific Investments.

The premier has been preaching the "keep it local" doctrine and has proclaimed that "B.C. is not for sale." His consistency should be questioned, for is it not precisely that during the Socred tenure that we have witnessed the takeover (mostly foreign) for a song, of our most vital resources, with government blessing?

The premier's statement is pure deceit. The present and previous Socred administrations have, in fact, put B.C. up for sale. Under their management the forest industry has in large part passed under foreign ownership, as have the mining and fishing industries. Crown Zellerbach is 89 per cent U.S.-owned, BCFP 42 per cent, Weldwood 74 per cent and Rayonier 96 per cent.

And indeed, hardly a month goes by without a B.C. government delegation going to the Orient or Europe to offer sale of B.C.'s vital resources to the highest bidder.

And unfortunately in all of this latest discussion and publicity the impression is somehow left that MacBlo, after having made its pile here, is a "good corporate citizen" and has the welfare of B.C.'s economy and its citizens at heart. Far from it. Let's look at the record.

Is it not a fact that MB was prepared to callously dump 700 workers at its Vancouver plywood mill and that this action was only stopped by the threat of massive union action? Is it not a fact that its modernization program at Port Alberni will put 300 workers out of a job without alternative employment? Is it not a fact that, swollen with super profits reaped during the anti-inflation controls period, MB was able last year to take over the main French pulp producer and now has achieved control of Domtar? Is it not a fact that MB has a large fleet under foreign registry and seamen, and at present is accepting delivery of two large "roll on, roll off" freighters built in Norway, while B.C. shipyards suffer 40 per cent unemployment? Is it not a fact that at the recent truck loggers convention MacBlo (along with other) was charged with being one of our top wood wasters, grinding good plywood and sawmill type logs into pulp while small outfits are starving for timber and cannot sell their chips? The list goes on and on.

The premier professes great concern for the welfare and security of our citizens, even to the extent of calling a special session to deal with the actions of a few school janitors. But if he is to be consistent and if there ever was a need to protect essential public interests, this is it. Let him call a special session now to take over MacBlo and add it to the B.C. Resources Investment Corporation. It would open the way for new policies to turn B.C.'s forest industry toward manufacturing and processing instead of remaining raw material and semi-processed based.

B.C. now has an opportunity to referse the trend towards monopoly domination of the province. The public takeover of the largest company in B.C. would reverse that trend and would start the process of returning control of B.C.'s resources to the people.

Then maybe he could offer us 10 shares! — Ernest L. Knott, Vancouver Island Regional Secretary, Communist Party of Canada.

Too Much Smoke

According to the latest health reports, being in a cigarette-fogged room for an hour or more is as detrimental to heart, lungs and digestive tract as smoking the weed oneself. And I would surmise that where an elderly person is concerned the hazard to the above organs would be increased, if not doubled.

We senior citizens have in Victoria several fine activity centres wherein our favorite crafts and hobbies may be indulged. It is most unfortunate, as in my case, that the centre closest to my home — Esquimalt — must no longer be visited by me for my beloved pasttime, chess, because of this condemned cigarette-smoking by all but four or five members. The windows do not open in the small room which has been assigned for chess, so there is no ventilation. I have taken my problem to those in charge of the centre without result.

This letter is a plea that someone in authority assign separate rooms for chess, or have a no-smoking sign erected. It is very difficult to concentrate, for me at least, on the game where the smoke is so thick, apart from aforementioned health reasons. — Mrs. Gladys Coulthard, 308-105 Gorge Road East.

Deserve Better

Once again it would appear that a majority of the trustees on the board of School District 61 are making decisions based on political orientation which detracts from progressive pupil education.

Vet Loses Pension

It has been brought to our attention that a veteran of the RCAF, Mr. Bury Drummond-Hay, is being unjustly penalized by the ministry of human resources.

Mr. Drummond-Hay served overseas in the Second World War and was a prisoner of war. In recent years he was on war veteran's allowance and in addition to this in April, 1976 the federal government granted a special compensation allowance to former prisoners of war based on their time of confinement. This was stipulated at the time to be an additional allowance, non-taxable and not to be deducted from any other allowances or pensions. The idea was that these veterans had suffered privations which shortened their life expectancy and damaged their health more than the servicemen who were not taken prisoner.

When Mr. Drummond-Hay turned 65 recently, he qualified for the old age pension and his war veteran's allowance thereby was automatically cut to the minimum to allow medical benefits. The provincial income supplement (paid under GAIN) was put into effect. Later the ministry of human resoyrces in Victoria realized he was getting $93.39 prisoner of war compensation and cut his entitlement to the provincial supplement by that amount.

As the original intent of the federal POW compensation was to alleviate the suffering of these individuals it seems cruel for another government to try to subvert this action by denying the extra amount of money to these deserving veterans.

This action does not only apply to Mr. Drummond-Hay but to other former POWs who are now over 65 and to ones who will soon reach 65. We demand that the ministry of human resources discontinue this practice and reinstate the POW compensation entitlement over and above the ordinary GAIN supplement. — Downtown Eastside Residents Association, Vancouver.

Schreyer Hoping to Fan Flames of Federalism

By M. HAROON SIDDIQUI
Toronto Star

Edward Schreyer, installed as governor-general, sees the threat of federal powers being eroded as posing as much danger to Canadian unity as the possibility of Quebec separation.

"It is so great a danger that it ranks among the two most important issues facing us to the end of this century," Schreyer said in a four-hour interview.

And he stressed that Ottawa must have enough powers to "guard against the horrendous consequences of drastic regional imbalance."

Schreyer discussed, among other things, the possibility, "however remote or real," of his reading Conservative Leader Joe Clark's speech from the throne, his views on monarchy, Quebec, and the role of the public and private sectors in Canadian resource industry.

Shares PM's Interpretation

He endorsed bilingualism, implied he shares Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's interpretations of federalism, said millions of quiet Quebecers still love Canada and that he will do his bit to convince Rene Levesque about the benefits of Confederation.

He described Levesque as "one of our 10 distinguished premiers, indeed one of our genuine Canadian native sons."

Making his case for a strong federal presence, Schreyer said it is not that Ottawa does not have enough powers under the existing constitutional framework. Federal regulatory and declarative powers, for example, are "quite substantial."

Rather, he said, "it is a case of whether efforts might be made to make inroads on that essential Canadian (federal) capability."

In an indirect reference to growing provincial — especially Alberta's — demands for greater control of resources and wider economic powers, Schreyer said:

"There is a scope for more decentralization of administration but when it comes to maintaining the essential unity of this country's economy, we must guard against that kind of decentralization that is tantamount to fragmenting this country's major capacity to act against the economic cycle."

His comments come in the wake of reports by Statistics Canada and the federal finance department that regional disparities are increasing dramatically, fuelled by massive oil revenues from consuming provinces to Saskatchewan, B.C. and mainly, Alberta.

Such transfers have gone up from $100 million in 1973 to about $4 billion last year, making the three the only provinces with balanced budgets. The Alberta Heritage Fund (money stashed away for future use) has swelled to $4 billion, and one in every four Albertans now earns $25,000 a year while 100,000 Manitobans subsist on less than $3,000 a year and one Maritimes home in eight has no flush toilet.

Schreyer said such anomalies sow the seeds of disharmony and threaten national unity.

Hinting he will become a high-profile spokesman for Canadian unity and federalism, Schreyer said he will be an active governor-general, going beyond the ceremonial, giving broader meaning to the traditional vice-regal guidelines set succinctly by Queen Victoria — "To be advised" by the prime minister and, in turn, "to advise, to encourage and to warn him" (Schreyer's emphasis).

More Than 'Textbook Definition'

"There will be considerable opportunity for all that, even more so than a textbook definition of the job. The prime minister has a very real and non-cynical view of that," he said, implying Trudeau and he share similar views on the duties and role of the governor-general.

Schreyer said Trudeau has asked him, "in so many words," to help carry the message:

"Is this country, on balance, not better off as a country with size, depth and diverse cultural interests than to have it fragmented into inward-looking economically weaker and culturally less interesting smaller components presuming to make a go of it alone?"

On the possibility of working with Joe Clark as prime minister, Schreyer said: "If he can command a majority in the House of Commons, he has a well-understood right to advise what documents or instruments of state he wishes signed."

Schreyer was asked if he foresees any possible crisis of conscience where he, as a social democrat, would have problems signing some Tory legislation.

"There is no precedent for refusing to sign on the basis of ideology. Plus, one has to have faith in Canada's Parliament that if there is something so dangerous and grotesque that it conjured up those kinds of theoretical images, then Parliament will have a great deal to say about it and will indeed persist in having a great deal to say.

"Our superior courts are a second line of defence, and they are, thank God, brilliantly led in themselves, almost always."

Discussing monarchy — his views on the subject have changed over the years from indifference to quiet tolerance to skeptical support — Schreyer said it is a system "which would be difficult to improve upon.
"It has worked well for our country, recognizing that no institution or human action is perfect.

"I look to those countries that have introduced republican forms of goverment and I don't see what they're gained and I do see what they've lost."

About his own sudden transition from active politics to the non-partisan job at Rideau Hall, Schreyer said time will cure people's perception. "I honestly don't foresee any problems."

He said his non-partisan demeanor will help him. "Although being partisan is necessary in a democracy and is necessary to carry out what you believe it, fact is I don't enjoy being partisan for the sake of being partisan. That I think is half the battle in this context.

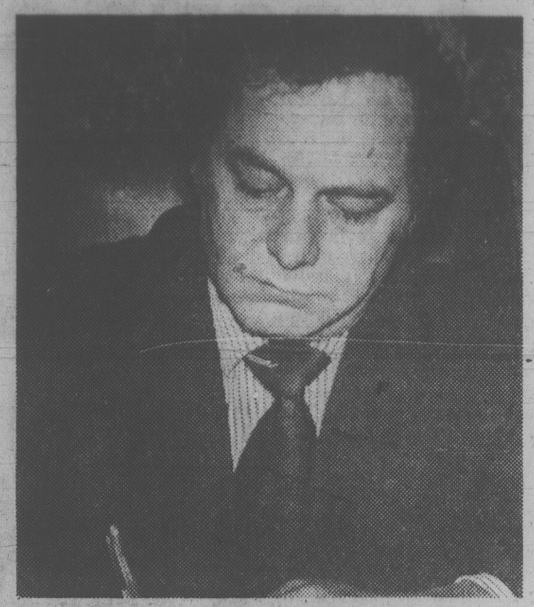
"I've always tried for consensus politics, and believe in what the late J. S. Woodsworth (founder of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, forerunner of the NDP) used to say by way of grace before his meals: 'What we desire for ourselves we wish for all.' And you know what the plaque in my office says."

It is a quotation from his other political mentor Franklin D. Roosevelt: "The test of our progress is not whether we add to the abundance of those who already have much but whether we succeed in adding to the lives of those who have less."

Now as governor-general and a man for all Canadians, Schreyer — who speaks French, German and Ukrainian — said he hopes to travel "to every nook and cranny" of English, French and remote northern Canada to convey the message of national unity and dispel the "negative current" that grips the land because of economic problems and the situation in Quebec.

Schreyer said there is "a tremendous reservoir of goodwill" among millions of French-Canadians, but "there are the ones who usually do not get the publicity. I mean that is a non-event in the judgment of news editors. How does a news editor justify covering a non-event? It is a dilemma. I am not imputing motives to the media in this sense."

As for Quebec's proposed referendum on independence/sovereignty-association, Schreyer considers frequent referendums to be incompatible with representative parliamentary democracy, and said in 1976 that on important issues the nine provincial governments should avoid bilateral negotiations with Quebec "like the plague."



Schreyer signing orders-in-council

Schreyer, the first native and life-long resident of western Canadian to become governor-general, said he would bring the West's grievances to the attention of Trudeau and the cabinet.

Discussing energy issues and the shift of billions of dollars from Western nations to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), and, within Canada, to the three energy-rich provinces, Schreyer said they pose "the most fundamental economic and social problems of our era."

He said Canada needs a 20-year projection of all energy resources and must make some "hard, tough decisions."

Cites Tanzanian Constitution

Schreyer considers problems emanating from high energy costs — inflation, monetary instability, sluggish economies, high unemployment — to be "the biggest de-stabliziing forces in Western democracies" and has said Canada needs "a national all-out effort, akin to the spirit of the Second World War" to resolve them.

He then quoted the opening paragraph of the constitution of Tanzania: "The resources of our country are owned by its people to be developed for their use and enjoyment and to be held in trust for the next and ensuing generations."

"There can be no more profound words than that," Schreyer said.

Trudeau's Stalking-Horse?

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — Several friends in the New Democratic Party get angry when I tell them that a few Liberal MPs, more reporters and many Tories whom I've spoken with see the forward-planning of Jim Coutts and Keith Davey in the appointment of Ed Schreyer as governor-general.

Coutts is Trudeau's principal secretary; Davey seems to be the prime minister's key adviser from the Liberal party. The interpretations of the Schreyer move go roughly on these lines.

Between the '72 election and the budget of '74 the minority Liberal government was sustained by the New Democratic Party caucus. Since then, there's been a chill in NDP-Liberal relations. In the past year, Broadbent, the New Democrats and their supporting Labor Congress cast, have been as bitter against the government as Joe Clark and the Tories.

This is potentially disastrous for the Liberals. It seems unlikely they will regain a comfortable majority at the next election. Therefore, what can they do, to ensure that in a minority Parliament the NDP will co-operate and sustain the Liberals?

The Schreyer step has been one response. It has the added utility — i.e. beyond warming up the NDP to Trudeau — of being at least marginally popular in the West, and it gives Trudeau another national spokesman who simply will get coverage when he muses aloud on national unity and the marvels of bilingualism and multiculturalism — all matters the Liberals see as their lines of endeavor.

That's the Grit reasoning, or the reasoning and scheming others attribute to them.

There is another fairly practical reason for expectations of future Liberal and NDP accord. Across the country, where the NDP can expect to hold seats and pick up some, the prime enemy is much more often the Tories.

When my NDP friends and acquaintances fume in responding to such arguments they're full of phrases like: "There's no difference between them." More specifically, they note that Broadbent and the federal party have chosen their basic policy for the campaign: It's economic; it's based on using our resources and resource industries to develop manufacturing jobs and to recapture ownership of our own economy and real estate.

One NDP MP seemed to feel neither Liberals nor Conservatives could adopt such a policy for sustaining a government.

This seemed rather naive to me, remembering the drumbeats which still echo from some Liberals like Walter Gordon (a respected mentor of Keith Davey) about a nationalist, economic policy.

My estimate on both the Schreyer appointment and the NDP position vis-a-vis the question of which devil, Grit or Tory, is that Schreyer is clearly an unwitting stalking-horse for partisan Liberal plans; that most New Democrats whom I've talked to about the appointment have been pleased with it; and that such an appointment is a small "plus" for Trudeau towards a future engagement of NDP parliamentary support, if it is needed.

However, if it comes to a choice, Schreyer or not, I'd wager about 5 to 1 the New Democrats would go for Trudeau and the Liberals, not for Clark and the Conservatives.

Modernization-Minded China Sends Youth Back to Books

PEKING — Here at Peking University one of the last decade's great social revolutions lies dead or dying.

After years of leading an attack on privilege and ambition in the world's most populous nation, the students here have settled back to a life of hard study, leading to important jobs and many fringe benefits.

Raucous wall posters demanding all kinds of social changes, many of them demanded by youths who failed to get into China's number one university, decorate main streets of downtown Peking. But there are no such posters out here on the campus in a quiet suburb. "Here we are just working hard all the time," said Deng Ling, 22, who studies English and who hopes for permission some day to travel to the United States.

In 1966, wall posters on this campus fired the first salvo in chairman Mao Tse-tung's war against bureaucrats too fond of their staff cars and against students too interested in high marks, to the detriment of less privileged or talented members of society.

The campaign threw the country into turmoil. Students travelled about China spreading Mao's message while the university closed for four years.

The contrast between the busy silence of this campus, with libraries filled and teachers respected, and the pungent posters still drawing hundreds of readers in central Peking, suggest the old Chinese debate over class and privilege remains unresolved.

Scholars have run this country for centuries. Chinese have always seen education as a way to escape a life of back-breaking physical labor. Professors used to grow long fingernails to show they did not work with their hands.

Mao and the rest of the Communist party fought to change this attitude, although only Mao and his closest supporters wished to go so far as to insist that the universities be gutted and all the students sent for long spells of farm work. Today, students and faculty retain a respect for the lives of the workers and peasants who are, in many cases, their parents. But they have different plans for themselves.

In a way, university administrators here are camouflaging the old class distinction Mao used to isolate the privileged classes. Intellectuals, meaning teachers, scientists, journalists and other professionals, were singled out. Under Mao they were sometimes discriminated against in job assignments and admissions of their children to universities.

The new system has given youths with book-conscious parents, or youths who live in cities with rigorous high school curricula, great advantages when taking the all-important national exam for university entrance.

Peking youths who failed to reach that level in this year's exam are accommodated at special day colleges where they can study while living at home. The system saves them from unemployment or work in the countryside, where living conditions have led several youths to put up complaining wall posters in Peking.

For the rapid modernization of the economy, China needs brains, so the students and faculty of Peking University are offered the rewards of good careers, perhaps with better housing and schools for their children.

$24M 'Foul-Up' On BCRIC Shares

Taxpayers will pay at least $24 million to receive five free shares in the B.C. Resources Investment Corp. (BCRIC), says Tory leader Vic Stephens.

Stephens said rather than being an exercise in free enterprise, the share distribution represents massive political interference in what is supposed to be an independent corporation, and will result in a colossal and costly foul-up.

He noted that it costs the Insurance Corp. of B.C. (ICBC) $24 million each year just to renew insurance policies for fewer than half the number of persons that would be dealt with in the BCRIC share distribution, which he said would probably cost more.

Premier Bill Bennett announced in January that all eligible residents of the province can apply to receive five free shares in the investment corporation, which owns pulp mills, sawmills and oil and gas rights.

The shares have an estimated value of $10 each.

Stephens also said the cost of distributing dividends, if any ever are declared, would exceed the dividends' value.

The government should spare the cost of the share giveaway and either sell the corporation itself or sell shares in the normal fashion at a realistic price, said the Tory leader.

PANCO BEEFING UP

Panco Poultry, the mainland firm bought late last year from the provincial government in a controversial deal, has announced a three-year, $3 million plant improvement program.

The plan will include installation of modern equipment and aims at stabilizing the future of 350 employees working for the firm, company officials say.

Roger Murray, president of Cargill Grain Ltd. of Winnipeg, which purchased Panco for $3.3 million, said new products will be developed to meet new consumer demands.

Panco had originally been acquired by the New Democratic Party government of former premier Dave Barrett in 1975 for $4.8 million. The NDP challenged the government's sale of the firm, saying an independent assessment showed the company to be worth $18 million.

The Cargill purchase included land, buildings, machinery and equipment used in Panco's processing and hatchery operations. Another $8 million worth of Panco's turkey farms, and a broiler and feed mill had been sold off to local producers earlier.

$60,000 Lottery Grant

A $60,000 provincial lottery grant has been awarded to the Duncan and District Association for the Mentally Handicapped.

The grant will be used to help underwrite the cost of completing two of the association's facilities — the Children's Place and the Achievement Centre.

Sixty pre-school children, handicapped and non-handicapped, will use the facility.

The building was started last fall and requires plumbing, electrical service and other work before it can be used.

The adult centre teaches craft and life-skills to 50 mentally handicapped adults.

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis said the community support for the association's work has included the donation of a .94 acre site by the District of North Cowichan, and commitments for donations from local organizations and companies.

Libel Suit Doomed By Inadequate Plea

Failure to plead surrounding circumstances in the use of words by provincial Transportation Minister Alex Fraser against the husband of an NDP MLA was fatal to a libel action, Mr. Justice Harry McKay said in B.C. Supreme Court Wednesday.

He added that Peter Sanford, Courtenay high school teacher and husband of Comox MLA Karen Sanford, had frankly admitted that his reputation had not suffered in any way from the untrue statement made about him by Fraser Nov. 29, 1975.

The statement arose from an interview initiated by a Prince George radio broadcaster in which Fraser admitted hiring his daughter to do constituency work and added that Ms. Sanford did the same thing by hiring her husband.

Sanford sued Fraser and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation for libel but subsequently dropped the action against the CBC.

McKay said the untrue words used by Fraser were not defamatory although it was true that words which are not defamatory can become defamatory by their surrounding circumstances.

That, however, had not been pleaded in this action. McKay said pleadings by a plaintiff must disclose the basis of the allegations so that the defence can make a proper answer.

Sanford testified he was angry at Fraser's comment because it was untrue and he was concerned at how the comment would be received by others. He agreed he could not point to any concrete evidence of damage to his reputation.

McKay said the propriety or otherwise of familing hiring by MLAs to do constituency work, which was paid for by the government at $728 a month then and $1,000 now, was not an issue before him.

He also said there was no apology by Fraser until April, 1977, when a form of apology was received which said he didn't recall making the statement but if he did, then he apologized. McKay noted that Fraser had no trouble with his recollection when testifying in court Monday.

McKay also said there had been an inordinate delay in bringing a straightforward case to trial which he blamed on the parties. The matter should have been heard within six to 12 months of the broadcast.

Heart Campaign Poised

Valentines Day has been chosen by the B.C. Heart Foundation as a fitting time to start Heart Month.

On Feb. 14 about 1,500 volunteers in Greater Victoria will start door-to-door canvassing for the foundation's annual campaign.

But before that can happen, the foundation needs 500 volunteers who will help raise the $250,000 goal for Vancouver Island.

The provincial goal this year is $1,350,000.

This year's campaign theme is physical fitness and healthier eating habits, chairman George Holmes announced at the kickoff meeting Wednesday.

Guest speaker Dr. Sidney Katz, a research scientist at the University of B.C.'s department of pharmacology, said 90 per cent of the money raised will go toward research.

Katz, a biochemist who has been an active member of the foundation for a number of years, said many people don't realize some of the most important research by the foundation is never publicized.

Apart from the educational programs such as its televised anti-smoking campaign and clinical research, most of the foundation's work is never visible to the public.

Basic research lays the groundwork for major advances in medicine, which could never take place without the careful assimilation of hundreds of pieces of information.

Katz said thanks to basic research breakthroughs, in 15 or 20 years scientists and doctors should be able to replace the human heart.

But research has only solved half the problems, Katz said. There are still huge gaps that have to be bridged in the field of heart research.

Partners Sought On Oil Sands

GRAND CENTRE, Alta. (CP) — Esso Resources Canada Ltd. is still looking for partners to contribute about $2 billion to its proposed Cold Lake oil sands plant, a company official says.

R. B. Peterson, Esso's vice-president for heavy oil, told the Alberta Energy Resources Conservation board (ERCB) hearing into the project that Esso probably would retain 50 per cent of the project, to be built in the Cold Lake area about 240 kilometres northeast of Edmonton at an estimated cost of $4.7 billion.

Esso also would act as operator of the plant which would be the first commercial attempt to recover oil from Alberta's enormous oil sands.

Although Esso officials have discussed the possibility of a partnership with other companies, Peterson said such negotiations probably will not be finalized until the project's fiscal terms and conditions are known.

He said the main fiscal matter — provincial royalties — will not be decided until after the ERCB gives its opinion on the project.

Peterson said potential partners will have to have the assets on which they can raise the $2 billion-plus investment — because the project will support little or no debt financing.

PM again Blocks Dollar Decline Probe

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau, for the second consecutive day, rejected an opposition demand that the continued deterioration of the Canadian dollar be made the subject of a thorough inquiry by the Commons finance committee.

On New York money markets, the Canadian dollar regained some lost ground today after dropping almost a third of a cent to a 46-year low on Wednesday.

At noon today, the dollar was trading at 83.40 U.S. cents, up fractionally from Wednesday's close of 83.38 U.S. on the interbank wholesale market and up from a low for this morning of 83.31 U.S. cents.

Opposition Leader Joe Clark and the prime minister clashed again Wednesday as they had on Tuesday over the government's policies which the opposition claims has weakened the Canadian dollar.

"The lack of candor on the part of the government is contributing to the growing uncertainty about the country's economy. The government has only itself to blame — not speculators, not the opposition and not the world's economy — when its present policies fail to halt the decline in the value of the dollar," Clark said outside the house.

Clark again called on the prime minister to refer the dollar's decline to the commons finance and economic affairs committee for a full public inquiry. He said that committee should be empowered to call witnesses such as the Governor of the Bank of Canada Gerald Bouey, Finance Minister Jean Chretien, currency traders for the government, representatives of chartered banks and investment dealers.

The prime minister dismissed the call for a public inquiry but said he had no objection to a full scale debate on the dollar in the house. The opposition want a commons committee inquiry, not just a debate. They want to be able to question witnesses.

They complain that the last time Governor Bouey of the central bank was before the finance commons committee when they tried to ask questions about the dollar, the questions were ruled out of order.

Meanwhile, Conservative MP Dan McKenzie of Winnipeg demanded that Finance Minister Jean Chretien make an unequivocal statement to Parliament that the government does not plan to implement exchange controls.

McKenzie said there is growing speculation that the government will momentarily impose controls that would limit the amount of money that could be carried or sent out of the country.

McKenzie said brokers and investment counsellors are telling clients to prepare for the controls by transferring their investment funds outside the country now.

Chretien told reporters at a Montreal luncheon the government has no plans to impede the flow of money between Canada and other countries.

Asked what further guarantee he needs, McKenzie said in an interview: "All Mr. Chretien has said is that there will be no exchange controls at this time. That hasn't stopped the rumors. I hear that the documents needed to impose them are ready."

Transit Levy on Island Capital Region Choice

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm says the decision on whether to include Salt Spring Island in the regional transit area is up to the region.

In an interview Wednesday, Vander Zalm said he has to accept the Capital Regional District's amended recommendation to include the island in the area to be assessed for transit costs.

Salt Spring's five service station operators said earlier this week they would all close if they are forced to add the three-cent-a-gallon transit levy April 1.

The gas tax increase throughout the region will go to offset the cost of the region taking over bus service from B.C. Hydro.

Originally the Gulf Islands were left out of the transit levy area, but largely at the insistence of an Islander — Jim Campbell of Saturna who was chairman of the regional board at the time — the decision was reversed and the islands included.

Victoria alderman and CRD transit chairman Bill Tindall said it is unlikely the decision can be reversed once again with April 1 looming so close.

November Election Gazing

Less than three months after the latest municipal election, the Saanich Greenbelt Association is already worrying about the impact of this November's election on Saanich's natural environment.

Association vice-president Roy Harrington appealed Wednesday for citizens who believe in greenbelt protection to stand as council candidates.

"The upcoming fall election could be even more crucial for our cause than was the case last year," he told the association's annual meeting.

A brief prepared by newly-elected president Hal Knight on the need to preserve agricultural land in Saanich was endorsed by the membership. Copies will be sent to all B.C. cabinet ministers.

Uranium 'Scare Tactics' Used

Some opponents of nuclear power are using scare tactics in an effort to halt uranium mining in this province, Mining Association of B.C. managing director Robert Matthew said Wednesday.

He said they are exaggerating dangers from radiation and from radon gas, which is associated with uranium mining.

Matthew said the scare tactics are also being used against nuclear power plants, but this is not yet an issue here.

He made the statements at The Empress in a news conference called to discuss the impending public inquiry into uranium mining. The provincial government has appointed Dr. David Bates of the University of B.C. to head the probe.

Bates will hear briefs from the mining association and other groups and will make recommendations for worker and public safety and for protection of the environment.

There is no uranium mining in B.C. at this time but at least four potential sites have been located, one with an estimated $400 million worth of uranium at the Blizzard property, southeast of Kelowna.

Matthew said core samples at Blizzard are handled by workers with no health risk.

He said uranium mining could be a significant addition to the provincial mining industry and said it is unfortunate people tend to associate it with nuclear bombs.

There are already 150 nuclear power plants operating in the western world, some of which have been producing electricity since the 1950s, and to date there has not been a single accident related to the release of radioactivity, he said.

Despite this, he said, opponents of nuclear power are creating a confrontation in the community by exaggerating the potential dangers.

While B.C. gets most of its electricity from hydro, other parts of Canada and the world are looking to other sources, including oil, gas, coal and nuclear power to meet their energy needs.

It has been estimated that by the year 2000, about 45 per cent of electricity could be generated by nuclear power and by the year 2020 that figure will be up to 57 per cent, he said.

Matthew said that while uranium development regulations were not stringent enough in the early years, that is not the case today, and tough federal rules are updated every two years.

A prime concern, the long-term disposal of nuclear waste, has been studied by Atomic Energy Ltd. of Canada which has concluded that "burial of waste deep in the ground is the best solution."

Matthew said his group supports the government inquiry into uranium mining and will assist any way it can.

"We support uranium mining in B.C., but only if the uranium can be mined safely. The public, the mineworkers, and the environment must be protected," he said.

Pacific Press Probe?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The publishers of Vancouver's two daily newspapers, shut down by a strike-lockout for three months, said Wednesday they would be willing to take part in an independent inquiry into the dispute.

Clark Davey, publisher of the Vancouver Sun, and Paddy Sherman, Province publisher, said in a joint statement that several informal discussions with representatives of the pressmen's and mailers' unions had produced no basis for agreement on how to return to direct bargaining.

Union representatives refused comment, saying they had not seen the statement.

Pacific Press, which produces the morning Province and evening Sun, has been shut down since Nov. 1 when two of six unions went on strike and the other four unions were locked out. About 1,400 workers are off the job.

A press manning clause, which determines how many pressmen are on a given shift, has been a stumbling block in negotiations.

Shah's Voice on Tape?

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The shah of Iran, at an eleventh-hour meeting with his top advisers before fleeing Iran, left orders for the army to "shoot freely" at civilians to foment civil war in his absence, a secretly recorded tape smuggled out of Iran indicates.

In a copyright story broadcast Wednesday by KNXT in Los Angeles, the shah reportedly also expressed concern that Iran's secret police, SAVAK, had been too lenient and promised never again to allow "the slightest moment for a spark of enlightment" among the Iranian people.

However, Associated Press correspondent Parviz Raein in Tehran listened to a copy of the recording by telephone and said it was "definitely not the shah."

Raein, who has known the shah for 37 years, said numerous copies of the recording have been available in Tehran for weeks, for as little as $2-$3. He said people who are familiar with the shah's voice do not believe it, "but others do."

KNXT, owned and operated by CBS television, quoted a tape recording that UPI learned was smuggled out of Iran by an army general loyal to the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Sources told both KNXT and UPI that members of the CIA were present when the shah made his remarks.

The voice on the tape, identified by experts as that of the shah, said:

"Through creating hostility and hatred between the army and the people by ordering the soldiers to shoot freely and kill, you could throw these two weighty forces against each other. A long civil war, thus created, will gain us enough time during which we could devise countermeasures, perhaps by introducing a government which would appear to some extent acceptable to the people.

"In this manner, and in light of acquired experiences, we shall gradually proceed — God willing — to shore up our powers.

"I mean, people should not be allowed too much freedom, as they proved they did not deserve this blessing which I had granted them."

Three experts in voice identification overwhelmingly agreed the tape, in which the shah speaks in Persian, is authentic.

Iranian students, who quoted the tape to UPI on Jan. 20, said it proved the shah is still a threat to Iran, thus a target for their demonstrations. In the tape, the shah also spoke of his internal security force, SAVAK.

"We will create a more extensive security force to replace the SAVAK," the voice said.

Khomeini Back With Warcry show of strength on his behalf. Western assessments said the country now was close to full-scale civil war.

The ayatollah, who also declared the 2,500-year-old Iranian monarchy is now over, said "Bakhtiar is a person...neither the army nor the people accepts as legal."

The ayatollah coupled his attack on the United States with a plea to the army to renounce its support of Bakhtiar and join his revolution.

"We gave the United States oil and they gave us back weapons and this was a trick," Khomeini said. "The United States forced us to have bases and advisers. So they used our oil resources for their own benefit."

The ayatollah said the United States wanted to reinstate the shah but he said, "we will not let the United States bring the shah back."

Appealing to army generals, he said, "we want you to be independent" of American advisers. "You generals, don't you want that? I advise you to come and be with the people."

The ayatollah said, "we don't want a (military) system that someone else (the United States) operates for us."

"I tell you it is up to all of us to keep on this revolution until we choose the government."

The Foreign Prof Issue Fades Out

Today's problem is development of grad programs which is so slow Canada won't be able to meet its needs for at least 10 years and probably longer, says Petch

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

A decade ago Canadian academics alarmed about the number of foreign professors teaching in this country's universities were kicking up a storm.

There was a lot of talk of American infiltration. Canada's universities were becoming satellites of U.S. institutions, they said.

The problem now has all but disappeared.

The reversal can be attributed to several factors, says University of Victoria president Howard Petch.

Firstly, a number of foreign professors entering Canadian institutions as landed immigrants have become Canadian citizens, Petch says.

Another factor is the improvement in Canadian graduate schools — they are starting to better meet the needs of universities, he said.

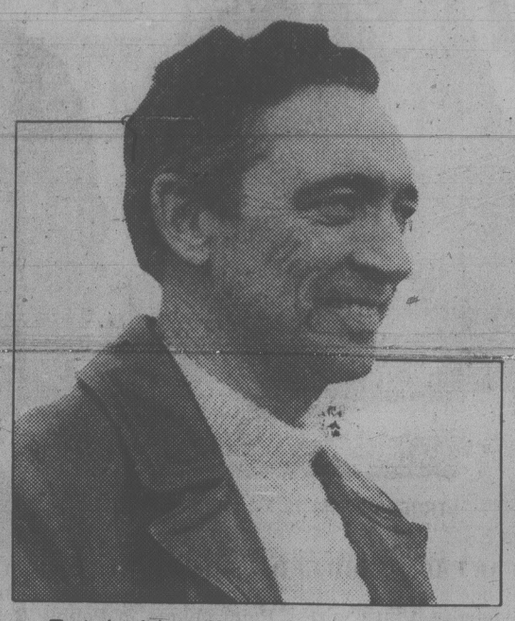
There was never really any danger of undue American influence, Petch said, even 10 years ago when most of the country's universities were heavily populated by U.S. academics.

The Canadian element was always strong, Petch maintains, because deans and faculty heads were mostly Canadian, or had years of Canadian experience.



Petch: big effort to hire Canadians

Canada must still import a lot of its arts and science graduates.

The situation isn't quite as bad as it was a few years ago when the annual number of arts and science grads supplied by Canadian graduate schools wouldn't fill a single department of one university.

"We weren't turning out enough even to begin to fill our needs," Petch said.

Today the biggest problem area is education. Development of grad programs is so slow Canada won't be able to meet its needs for at least 10 years, probably longer, he said.

Fortunately, a lot of Canadians do their graduate work in education in the U.S. and then return home.

However, in some other disciplines, graduates students don't come back because there isn't enough professional experience available.

"I don't think we've made much progress and I'm worried about it."

In areas of specialized training, Canada isn't doing so well, Petch said.

"I don't know what the reasons are. Maybe we just haven't got around to it yet."

Strategy Huddle Over Trade Loss

North Douglas merchants upset about lost business resulting from new traffic patterns have been invited to air their complaints at the Feb. 12 meeting of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce transportation committee.

"We would like to hear from them to see if there is a united approach we can make on the issue," chamber transportation director Larry Martell said.

He said only two or three North Douglas merchants have approached the chamber so far. They have been talking about establishing their own organization to fight for improved signs, and possibly an overpass to bring traffic down Douglas from the Pat Bay highway.

The Town and Country merchants association will meet next week to decide on its next step and Edward Bowcott, sales manager of Douglas Volkswagen, has suggested that all North Douglas merchants form a new organization.

North Douglas merchants report business is down as much as 70 per cent since the bypass was opened and Pat Bay Highway traffic was routed down Blanshard.

In a separate chamber issue, Martell said downtown merchants have revived their demand for longer hours in Victoria for the Princess Marguerite to enable visitors to do more shopping.

They believe the Marguerite should be here five hours, like it was until 1976, and not just four hours, he said.

The statement comes one day before the Marguerite's 1979 schedule and rates are due to be set by the board of the B.C. Steamship Co.

When run by the CPR, the Marguerite arrived in Victoria from Seattle at 12:30 p.m. and stayed until 5:35 p.m., having made a side trip to Port Angeles and back.

In 1976, under the new Social Credit government, the trip to Port Angeles was cancelled and the hours were shortened to from 12:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Martell said he understands it would increase the costs of running the Marguerite to have her here for the extra hour but the value to the community would outweigh the expense.

Various downtown merchant groups are also pushing for longer hours for the Marguerite.

The issue arose when Nootka Court merchants began asking for support from business organizations for their request to the government for longer Marguerite hours.

Ella Small, operator of Brower's Corner, said some merchants have noticed a reduction in business since the hours were shortened in 1976.

"The ship should not be run with the idea of profit to the operation or even the ministry of tourism but rather as an asset to the business community," she said.

Age, Height Limits Lifted For City Police

If you're over 28 years of age and under five feet eight inches tall you can now apply to become an officer on the city police force.

The police board Wednesday took the lead on other Greater Victoria forces and removed the age and height restrictions that had been in effect for years.

But Chief Jack Gregory made it clear that if he's faced with the choice of two equally qualified candidates, he'll pick the one with the better physique, including height.

Told by board member Alf Hood that would be discrimination, Gregory replied: "I have to stand up and make a judgment at some point."

Deputy Chief Jim Smith said in an interview the old requirement that candidates be 19 to 28 violated the Human Rights Code which states age should not be a barrier for anyone seeking a job.

Smith said the height limits — minimum five feet eight inches for men and five feet four inches for women — had always been controversial.

"We'd get people coming in who met all the criteria except height," he said.

★ ★ ★

"They'd ask why they couldn't become a policeman just because they were only, say, five feet five. The officers would try to explain but it was often a sore point.

"Now there'll be no argument."

Height limitations are still in effect in other forces. An applicant has to be at least five feet 10 to become a policeman in Oak Bay; five feet eight inches for the other police departments. Saanich and Central Saanich also have a minimum height of five feet four for female officers.

Area police chiefs indicated no change is contemplated until the B.C. Police Commission completes a study on the issue. The commission has recommended removal of all age and height restrictions.

The matter will be discussed at the next meeting of the B.C. Association of Chiefs of Police in Vancouver Feb. 9.

Smith said applicants to the city force still have to meet the basic requirements — Grade 12 or equivalent, weight commensurate with height and age, acceptable vision meaning 20-20 with or without soft contact lenses, good health, good character and possessing a valid B.C. driver's licence.

Candidates also have to pass the B.C. Police Academy physical and attend the training college.

The board decid to defer a proposal that the probationary period be cut. Rookies now must complete one full year on the force before being promoted to the rank of probationary third-class constable.

The proposal would see rookies promoted immediately on their graduation from the 34-week-long first stage training session at the police academy.

Student Job Plea

Labor Minister Allan Williams urged employers Wednesday to make an extraordinary effort to provide worthwhile summer jobs for students and other young people this year.

The ministry is looking for the creation of some 13,500 jobs for young people in 1979, and will share wage costs for up to eight months for each person employed.

The emphasis will once again be on creation of jobs that offer work experience training to better equip young people to enter the work force.

The ministry will place 28 field workers throughout the province to administer the program.

Q. Can you tell me who first scaled the Matterhhorn peak on the borders of Switzerland and Italy?. T.D.H.

A. The first ascent was by English climbers Edward Whymper, Lord Douglas, and others. In the descent four of the party of seven were killed.

Q. I was reading a book dealing with 17th century English history and it referred briefly to the Meal Tub Plot. Can you tell me what it was all about.? J.L.

A. It was a fictitious plot invented during a period when agents provocateurs were a dime a dozen. Thomas Dangerfield in 1679 invented it, claiming a popish plot. He alleged that documents were hidden in a meal-tub (hence its name) of a servant of Lady Powys. The two were tried and acquitted.

Cricket Yes, Island No

The city of Victoria can find $20,000 for a new cricket clubhouse in Beacon Hill Park but isn't willing to contribute a dime towards the purchase of Sidney Island.

Council's finance committee today recommended approval of a $20,000 grant to the Victoria and District Cricket Association.

Minutes later, the committee rejected a request from Mayor Dick Leigh of Sidney that Victoria give financial support to the Sidney Island Committee.

The committee has started a fund drive in an attempt to persuade the provincial government to buy the island for a park.

The committee has collected more than $2,700, with $1,725 coming from the public and the municipalities of Sidney and North Saanich each pledging $500.

Ald. Larry Ryan opposed any financial aid from the city, saying while he supports the effort morally he doesn't want to put any money behind it.

$3.9 Million Trawler Has a Cheering Section

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

A Victoria man and three Prince Rupert friends own the $3.9 million Callistratus, the first Canadian freezer trawler to receive a licence to fish Canada's 200-mile fishing zone.

Hemmons' wife Libby and their two children — Deena, 19, and 16-year-old Dary — were in Japan for the launching and returned to Canada aboard the Callistratus earlier this month.

Prince Rupert-raised Hemmons has been fishing for 20 years and Dickens about 30 years.

Mrs. Hemmons said Dickens began planning the new ship two years ago when a Japanese buyer was reluctant to buy his herring roe because of the substandard quality. The Japanese suggested he have a vessel built in Japan with modern equipment to maintain the quality of the catches.

The partners would have liked to use a Canadian shipyard but building in Japan is "a lot cheaper and there's also the time factor . . . they don't have any strikes in Japan."

The partners received financial backing from the Prince Rupert Fishermen's Co-op and the Prince Rupert Fishermen's Credit Union.

Fish can be frozen aboard the Callistratus within five hours. Scanning equipment helps locate and identify schools of fish while onboard telex equipment provides fast communication to buyers in Japan and Europe.

Mrs. Hemmons says she and the other wives are resigned to seeing little of their husbands during the first year of operation. With 20 to 22 crew members Callistratus will fish all year round, moving to Nanaimo and Victoria after the current two-month run.

The Callistratus was launched with great ceremony, complete with streamers and confetti and the customary crack of champagne. The Japanese also wined and dined the Canadians.

The Hemmons and their partners celebrated Christmas Day in the ship's galley, which seats 24, dining on four small Japanese turkeys and cranberry sauce that cost $18 for six small tins.

The Canadians told the Japanese they would love to have some Christmas music to round out the day. Soon a stereo and Canadian records were delivered to the ship.

Mrs. Hemmons says the Japanese, used to building basic "work horses," were astonished at the comfort built into Callistratus. She has a sauna and three showers aboard. Each of the owners has his private stateroom, the skipper's being equipped with a full-scale bathroom.

New Year's Eve, too, was celebrated aboard Callistratus (named for the Greek saint who protects fishermen), on her journey home.

Mrs. Hemmons says the ship showed her seaworthiness, thrashing through seas that at times swept over her.

In sea trials before leaving Japan, Callistratus ran at 14.7 knots but Mrs. Hemmons said on the way home the ship reached 16 knots when the sea was calm.

A Race Honor for Jim; A Tip for the Trippers

A couple of items that may be of interest.

First, Jim Keeling Sr., the venerable fellow with the ever-present cigar who sat on the railing at the landing at the North end of the grandstand at Sandown Park last summer, has received a signal honor.

Keeling was cited at the recent National Association of Canadian Race Tracks (NACRT) meetings in Toronto for his contribution to Canadian racing. He was awarded the John J. Mooney Award over four other nominees for "his vision and determination in taking harness racing to the West Coast — a place where it had failed miserably in previous tries."

The committee lauded Keeling not only for the outstanding performance of Cloverdale, but for attempting year-round racing by holding a meeting at Sandown Park on Vancouver Island. So it was an honor well-deserved and Keeling's three tracks — Orangeville, Ont., Cloverdale and Sandown — handle about $50 million annually.

Second, there is a new betting gimmick about to be foisted on the wagering public in some areas at least.

It is called for the want of a better handle — Win Three — because that's what it is. A punter no longer can be satisfied with the "daily double" which is winning two in a row and tough enough, but now the object will be to pick three winners of three consecutive races! Agriculture Canada is still drawing up the rules of the game, many tracks have expressed an interest in this new marketing tool, but others like Exhibition Park are expected to shy away from it for the time being or until its popularity has been determined.

The thinking in some quarters is that it will be more favorable than the "triactor" because winners are involved rather than the first three finishers in a race. However, I think the triactor is neater, perhaps a better out for the last race on the program, tough enough and, like "win three", is really for hoper-pickers only.

At any rate, fear not, Walker's Handy Hints to Handicappers will soon have the answer to the "daily double", "win-three" or "triactor" or whatever?

He's got this new advice, see, and it tells more than all he knew before. Which is quite a bit.

Such as:

The secret of beating the races is specialization. Anyone knows, for instance, that a sprinter going a distance or a runner returning to the track after a long layoff is only for long-shot Louie and better the bettor have a coffee instead.

The real handicapper on the other hand wants to deal strictly with the factors that likely will determine the outcome of the race.

Like maybe the speed handicapper with his myriad of figures. He's got his own system and, for a fledgling speed handicapper — the details of which have been explained here previously (check your files) — there is no better bible than Picking Winners: A Horseplayer's Guide, by Andrew Beyer. Every handicapper should have one and read it.

Not that it's perfect mind, for Beyer in his latest release suggests that speed handicapping is becoming too fashionable, others have caught on, and the good one that paid plenty a few years ago is often the favorite now it should have been then.

So with the profitability of this type of handicapping rapidly diminishing, something new must be taken into account. And the new magic phrase is "Trip Handicapping". I suppose one could say it parallels the "pace" aspect of handicapping, because they do go together.

It is a relatively new approach and wasn't feasible before tracks installed closed-circuit monitors. These give the fans the edge they needed, an immediate replay of the race plus, for the early arrivals the next day (at Ex Park for instance), a run down of yesterday's card. And there on the screen the reasons where the handicapper went wrong the day before.

One thing on which trip handicappers agree is that the crucial parts of horse races are the turns, and that races are won and lost by horses saving ground or losing ground. They envision a track as having lanes. One horse will be racing along the rail; the horse outside him is in the "two path;" the horse outside both of them is in the "three path." The trip handicappers make careful note of the path in which a horse is running when he goes around the turn, and when the field fans out into the stretch. (In their verbal shorthand, they might describe a horse's trip as "five turn, seven entering.")

Easy, wot? At any rate, that's the preliminary analysis. Think it over. It makes sense. There will be more later; you can bet on it.

(Gee, I wonder if jockey Steve Cauthen knows about this?)

Cougars Wonder If Worst Is Over

This is the day January comes off and February shows, and no one was happier with the calendar adjustment than coach Jack Shupe and the Victoria Cougars.

Winding up with Wednesday's 3-2 loss to the Bruins in New Westminster, the injury-racked Cougars scored only one victory and four ties while losing eight Western Hockey League games. It was a month in which the Cougars, starting out with a good grip on second place in the Western Division, have slipped to third, three points behind New Westminster.

It was a month in which the Cougars were levelled by a series of injuries.

Little wonder, then, that Shupe welcomes the new month.

For one thing, February offers some solid, home-ice advantage. Nine of the month's 12 games for Victoria are to be played at Memorial Arena. Most immediate are Saturday's date with Billings Bighorns and a Tuesday encounter with New Westminster, a game originally scheduled Jan. 13 but postponed when fog prevented the Bruins from leaving the mainland.

And, more important, these are the days in which Victoria's walking wounded are expected to work their way back into the lineup. One, defenceman Todd Morton, came back Wednesday. Four still to come.

Winger George Fritz, a knee hurt healed, started skating Monday and could be ready for Saturday's game. Bob Smith, another winger with a knee injury, and defenceman Scott (bad back) Lang and Robert (bad wrist) Jacobson are expected to start working their way back next week.

The Cougars, reaching to Fort Saskatchewan, Alta., and Nanaimo for player help Wednesday, once again played well under adverse conditions but were foiled by Richard Martens' outstanding netminding and a late goal by Neil Meadmore.

Meadmore broke a 2-2 tie at 13:55 of the final period to give the Bruins, playing their ninth game in 11 days, the victory. Scott MacLeod, on a power play, and former Cougar Mickey Willgress counted New Westminstep's other goals midway in the game.

Mike Shields and Brad Palmer scored Victoria's goals.

Morton, getting last-minute clearance to play, and 16-year-old Len Dawes, called up from Nanaimo, joined Tony Feltrin and Mark Robinson on the blueline and gave Victoria four defencemen for the first time in four games.

In addition, Cougars also brought in Brad Yachimec from Fort Saskatchewan to play on the wing.

MIKE KELLAR

Seahawk Official Dinner Guest

Mike Keller, assistant to the general manager of Seattle Seahawks, has joined the list of head table guests for the annual Greater Victoria Sports Celebrity Dinner on Monday, March 12, at the Empress Hotel.

Keller has been involved in the National Football League since 1972, when Dallas Cowboys selected the All-America defensive end from Michigan in the third round of the draft.

He spent the 1973 season on the injured reserve list and worked in the Dallas scouting department under the direction of Dick Mansperger, now director of player personnel with Seattle.

Keller became a full-time scout for Dallas in 1974 and moved to Seattle in May of 1975 as a staff scout.

He became assistant to general manager John Thompson prior to last season.

Keller joins Vancouver television commentator Jack Webster, Canadian Football League coach-of-the-year Jack Gotta, B.C. Racing Commission member Jack Short and University of Victoria physical education professor Martin Collis at the head table.

Proceeds from the dinner, which recognizes outstanding achievement and service to sport in the Greater Victoria area, will go toward Saanich Kiwanis charities for crippled children.

Tickets are going fast but some are still available from the sports departments of the Victoria Times, The Daily Colonist, CFAX, CJVI, CKDA, CHEK-TV and The Sportscaster.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED

New Capitals Don't Panic

By The Canadian Press

The old Washington Capitals might have just packed up and gone home if they fell behind in a contest. But those days, it seems, are over.

The Capitals trailed Los Angeles 2-1 entering the third period of their home game against the Kings Tuesday night, but erupted for three goals in a 3:06 span of the third period for the 5-3 victory that marked their fifth victory in the last seven games.

And suddenly, the Cinderella Capitals are just six points away from Pittsburgh Penguins, who hold the final wild-card spot in the National Hockey League playoffs.

The triumph, in their 52nd game, equalled the victory total it took 80 games to achieve last season and left them just seven short of their all-time high.

"They played very well," said Los Angeles coach Bob Berry after the Kings had lost for the third time in four games. "They started their streak the last time we were in here, and they're just playing very well."

In other games, Montreal Canadiens beat Pittsburgh Penguins 4-1, Boston Bruins and Chicago Black Hawks played to a 2-2 tie, Colorado Rockies beat New York Rangers 5-4, Toronto Maple Leafs beat St. Louis Blues 5-1 and Atlanta Flames defeated Buffalo Sabres 5-2.

After Dave Taylor's second goal of the game and 29th of the season gave Los Angeles a 2-1 lead, the Capitals waited 3:39 into the third period to start their surge.

Robert Picard tied the game with a power-play goal, then Greg Polis scored his sixth goal in eight games as a Capital at 4:52 and Dennis Maruk added insurance at 6:45. The Kings' Randy Manery and Washington's Ryan Walter traded goals later in the period.

"I think we deserved to win tonight, but the way things were going, I'd have settled for a tie," said Washington coach Danny Belisle. "The last two games we've been off our game a bit. I'm glad we have the next two days off to practice our basics."

Pete McNab's goal with 1:03 left in the second period gave Boston its tie.

The Bruins, who have won only two of their last 10 games, also received a goal from Dwight Foster. Ted Bulley and Stan Mikita replied for the Hawks.

Steve Shutt scored two goals and set up another, giving him four goals and six assists in his last four games, as Montreal extended its unbeaten streak to nine games by beating Pittsburgh.

Rookie Merlin Malinowski scored what proved to be the winning goal to turn back a Ranger rally.

Anders Hedberg scored twice while Walt Tkaczuk and Ron Duguay tallied once each to pace New York's comeback, which started with just 10:10 remaining in the game. Ron Duguay scored New York's first goal.

John Anderson scored two goals, his first two ever at Maple Leaf Gardens, to pace the Leafs. Leaf captain Darryl Sittler, with his 20th of the season, Borje Salming and Ron Ellis also scored for the Leafs.

Brian Sutter scored for the Blues.

Bobby Lalonde scored after just 25 seconds of play, starting the Flames to victory and handing Buffalo a club record fourth consecutive home loss.

Mueller Takes Downhill

VILLARS-SUR-OLLON, Switzerland (Reuter) — Peter Mueller of Switzerland won a men's World Cup downhill ski race today in one minute, 45.97 seconds.

He was followed by Austrians Leonhard Stock and Werner Griessmann who finished second in 1:46.19 and third in 1:46.20, respectively.

Top Canadian was Dave Murray of Abbotsford, B.C., who tied for 22nd spot with Sepp Buercher of Switzerland in 1:47.89. Ken Read of Calgary finished 30th in 1:48.48.

On Paper, Team NHL Solid But Lacking Time

NEW YORK (CP) — The die is cast for Bill Torrey and Scotty Bowman, who have completed their 25-man roster after dropping seven players from the all-star team that will face the Soviet Union in the first Challenge Cup.

It could be the most exciting international hockey series since Team Canada went to Moscow in 1972 and won. Or it could turn into a costly dud, risking the reputation of the National Hockey League as the home of the best players in the world.

Bowman, coach of Team NHL, has been given a team that is superior on paper. But he has just a few days to whip it into a cohesive unit against the Soviet national team that has played together for several months.

Bowman's credentials are impeccable, having coached Team Canada to victory over the Soviets in the Canada Cup and guided his champion Montreal Canadiens tm three straight Stanley Cups.

If he is to become a miracle worker, at least he will have six of the best Montreal players on Team NHL to help him.

"It's tougher than going into training camp and knowing what you have," says Bowman, noting the brief time span for practice before the three-game series starts in New York next Thursday. "It's going to be tougher, no question about it. We're going to get all the help we can."

The second game is on the same Madison Garden ice on Feb. 10 and the third Feb. 11.

Despite the head start of the Soviet team, Torrey says the NHL has players who are are experienced and adaptableenough to do the job.

The roster was cut to 25 from 32 on Wednesday, leaving 15 forwards, seven defencemen and three goalies.

When the final cut was made, defensive stars Ian Turnbull of Toronto and Guy Lapointe of Montreal were off the list. In Torrey's announcement, Lapointe was reported ill with a virus.

The five others dropped were forwards Rick Middleton and Terry O'Reilly of Boston and high-scoring Bob MacMillan of Atlanta, goalie Glenn Resch of the Islanders and defenceman Gary Sargent of Minnesota.

Montreal Girl, Pairs Coach Dominate Skating Spotlight

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — A 12-year-old Montreal girl and a proven pairs coach from Cambridge, Ont., monopolized the spotlight as the 1979 Canadian figure skating championships got under way Wednesday.

Charlene Wong of the Pierrefonds Figure Skating Club, who placed ninth in the junior women's compulsory school figures at the Eastern Canadian divisional championships in early January, surprised everyone, including herself, with a first-place finish in the school figures at the nationals.

Kerry Leitch of Cambridge continued his success as the top pairs coach in the country when Rosemary Barth and Keith Davis skated to the novice title, to mark the fifth year in a row Leitch has coached the novice champions.

Wong has a slight lead over Kay Thompson of Toronto, with Yvonne Anderson of Vancouver in third spot.

"I'm just going to try to do my personal best and see what happens," said Wong of the short program today and the freeskating final Friday.

Leitch's skaters took the silver medal as well as the gold in the novice pairs event, the first title to be decided at these championships. Penny Wilson and William Thompson of Cambridge won the silver medal, while the third-place bronze went to Bonnie Epp and David Howe of Vancouver.

"I was really pleased, although surprised, because of the standard of the pairs' skating all week," said Leitch. "The pairs haven't been skating as well as they did tonight, not mine in particular, but the other pairs.

"There were about four very, very good performances tonight. I didn't expect the novice level to be as high as what it was, and I'd say it's one of the highest levels in the last five years. It's surprising."

Two other Leitch-coached combinations are sitting in first and second positions in junior pairs after their compulsory-short programs Wednesday night. Lorri Baier and Lloyd Eisler have a slight lead over their clubmates Becky Gough and Mark Rowsom. Katherina Matousek and William O'Neill of Vancouver are a distant third heading into the free skate final today.

Another of Leitch's teams, Mary Jo Fedy and Tim Mills, were in fourth spot with Vanessa Howe and Jeff Mawle of Victoria fifth.

Earlier Wednesday, Ottawa skaters Mark MacVean and Campbell Sinclair took the top two positions in the junior men's compulsory figures. Mitch Giffin of Portage la Prairie, Man., is a distant third heading into the compulsory-short program today.

The Wednesday program also included three compulsory dance for juniors, with Kelly Johnson and Kris Barber of Toronto emerging as the leaders after the first of three segments of the competition.

LONGMORE JOINS FIELD FOR FINAL

VANCOUVER — Bart Longmore and his Playland Curling Club rink of Jim Dangerfield, Tony Ibariki and Barry Brown captured the final berth for the Pacific Coast Curling Association men's final starting Friday at Duncan by winning a special seven-rink playoff which ended here Wednesday.

Longmore edged Lorne Rustad of New Westminster 5-3 in the final at Arbutus Curling Club. Rustad forced the extra game by defeating Longmore 7-5 in the "B" final. Rustad earlier eliminated Playland's Barry Harvey 8-7.

The seven foursomes qualified for the extra Consols chance out of the Totem Bonspiel last November.

PAN-AM GOLD MEDAL WINNER HANGS UP SPIKES

Joyce No Longer Out to Beat World

JOYCE YAKUBOWICH

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

Despite what those good people close by (who bring you all those good things) tell you, Joyce Yakubowich is not out to beat the world.

Not any more, anyway.

For Joyce, who raced to a gold medal in the 1975 Pan American Games setting both a Canadian and Games record of 51.6 seconds in the 400 metres, is calling it quits.

Gone is the desire that made her a world-class sprinter and the determination to train that would be needed to compete in the Pan Am Games this summer and in the 1980 Olympics. Joyce won't go to either and instead she'll devote her life to some of the things that so far haven't even been able to take a second place to track.

Though track has been the number one thing to her for many years now, it wasn't always that way. Born in Toronto and raised "in many parts of Canada," Joyce Sadowick didn't do any running until she was almost 17 — and even then it was only to be with friends.

"I was pretty good at basketball but hadn't done any track," she says of her years at Burnaby Central High School. "Then one day when I was in Grade 11, I was walking down a corridor and my friends asked me if I'd make up the fourth place in a relay team."

She did and found that, though uncoached 'til then, she had a terrific natural talent. In that same year at 17 she was chosen to the national track team. That was 1970 and she has been on the team as Canada's 400-metre champ ever since.

Joyce married Victoria sprinter Brad Yakubowich, moved here to live and in 1975-76 was named the city's female athlete of the year.

Illness following the 1975 Pan Am Games affected her performance in the 1976 Montreal Olympics, so she dropped out of the Commonwealth Games program to train for the 1980 Moscow Games.

Now, at 25, though she says she's definitely not "an old veteran," Joyce Yakubowich is no longer prepared to devote all her time and effort to training.

"I was never a 'junior,'" she says. "I always competed as a senior and sometimes I get annoyed at the way track officials keep saying our future lies in our juniors and never do much for the seniors. Well, I'm not old out there in the world of track, when the world record-holder in my event is 32 and has two kids!

"Don't get me wrong, I love track and one day when I've finished my education, I want to help at some minor level of coaching.

"I will miss the competition but I have other things to do now. There are kids who are just satisfied to make the national team and you never hear anything much of them after that. Well, that's not good enough for me. If I can't give 100 per cent to it then I won't do it at all. I won't even run for recreation as that just isn't my level and I'd rather play tennis or squash."

Joyce says, too, that she just can't keep letting Brad do everything.

"The strain on a marriage is something terrific in this situation," she feels. "I've seen it happen to so many couples and I won't let it happen to us.

"Brad has his own business and I keep the books for him. We've just moved out of an apartment and have our own house and some day I'd like to have children."

As well, Joyce Yakubowich wants to complete her education and, hopefully, become a teacher and a Sunday school teacher.

"I've wanted to be a Sunday school teacher since I was seven and it always got pushed aside by track, which is a shame," she explains.

Right now Joyce is waiting for the opportunity to become part of the Sunday School staff at Victoria's Emmanuel Baptist Church.

"It seems sometimes with the younger kids it's never cool to be a Christian," she says. "I think it is."

UVic Squads In Third Spots

Both University of Victoria squads are holding down third-place positions as they prepare to travel to the University of B.C. in Vancouver this weekend for the second of three tournaments that decide the Canada West University Athletic Association volleyball championships.

In both men's and women's divisions, the CWUAA title is decided on results from three round-robin tourneys. The first was held at Edmonton in November and the final one is slated for Saskatoon, Feb. 23-24.

Canadian Girls Hit Their Positive Note

SPITAL, Austria (CP) — Canada's women downhill skiers wanted to finish up their European stay on a high note, so today's Europa Cup race here was just the tonic they needed.

After a somewhat disappointing season on the World Cup circuit, Laurie Graham's third-place finish led a Canadian charge that saw four members of the national squad finish among the top 11.

They get another opportunity to improve their FIS rankings Friday with another Europa Cup event.

Austrian Heidi Reidler won the race with a time of one minute 57.29 seconds. Graham, who had the fastest training time Wednesday, clocked 2:00.23 down the 2,700-metre course.

Dr. Inglewood, Ont., skier said the girls wanted to finish up on a positive note after their showings on the World Cup circuit so came to this event.

"We didn't expect to win, but we did hope to improve our points standings," Graham said. "We wanted to finish our European tour with a race where we had a fantastic chance of winning. It's changed our attitude. Now I'm looking forward to going home."

With the exception of veteran Kathy Kreiner of Timmins, Ont., the women's national team will be returning home Sunday to compete in the nationals and the North American stops of the World Cup circuit.

Loni Klettle of Jasper, Alta., placed sixth Thursday in 2:00.56 while Ann Blackburn of Chicoutimi, Que., was eighth with 2:01.30 and Marie Dufresne of St. Sauveur, Que., 11th in a time of 2:02.00.

Peace, Wenzel Tops In Times Tenpin List

Both series were rolled at Mayfair Lanes.

Doomsday Original Never Made All-Pro

DALLAS (AP) — Defensive tackle Jethro Pugh, the lone survivor of the old Dallas Cowboy's Doomsday Defence, has retired, possessing a record 23 appearances in National Football League playoff games.

Pugh, 34, never made a Pro Bowl or all-pro in his 14 years with the Cowboys, yet he was one of the primary reasons they made it to five Super Bowls.

Pugh didn't play in Super Bowl game on Jan. 21 because of injuries and said: "I've been thinking about retiring for a couple of years and I finally made up my mind it was time to do something else."

The 6-foot-6, 255-pound Pugh had 22 postseason appearances coming into this season and played briefly in the 28-0 NFC title win over Los Angeles Rams. He made a conservative $150,000 in bounty from playoff games.

Ivy's Top Techline

Brian Sutherland-Brown dunked 24 points Wednesday night to lead Strathcona Ivy's to an 86-75 victory over Techline Copy Centre in a Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League game at Central Junior High School.

Keen Battle in Fifth Test

ADELAIDE (Reuter) — England and Australia were locked in a keen battle for control of the fifth cricket test at close of play on the fourth day of the match Wednesday.

Australia ended the day on 82 for two, having been set a target of 366 runs to win the match after England was all out for 260 in its second innings 35 minutes after lunch.

Australian captain Graham Yallop and vice-captain Kim Hughes held its side's second innings together with an unbeaten 16-run partnership in 130 minutes, with Yallop not out 16 and Hughes not out 30 at the close.

England dismissed both Australian openers, Rick Darling and Graeme Wood, with only 36 runs scored and seemed to be getting control of the match until the fightback by Yallop and Hughes.

England had resumed in the morning at 262 for seven, with wicketkeeper Bob Taylor 69 not out and John Emburey nought, not out.

Taylor and Emburey figured in a valuable 69-run partnership which ended when Taylor was out off the last ball before lunch for 97.

Emburey went on to score 42 with some big hitting against a tired Australian attack.

"Did I say we had to plant them 4 feet deep? I meant 4 inches."

HARNESS MEETING SET FOR 65 DAYS

Harness-racing fans will get 65 days of action at Sandown Park this year, extending from May 19 to Sept. 8, if the recommendation of the B.C. Racing Commission is approved by the provincial cabinet.

The commission met Wednesday in Vancouver and Jack Keeling, general manager of Orangeville Raceways, announced the requested dates for Sandown had been approved at the meeting.

Orangeville Raceways started standardbred racing at Sandown with a 57-day meet last year.

"We are very pleased. We would like to establish harness-racing on a year around basis in B.C., and to do this we need the four summer months at Sandown," said Keeling.

"We were encouraged by the support we got last year and we feel certain that harness-racing will succeed in Victoria."

Wendy Beaten

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — Second-seeded Peanut Louie, 18, of San Francisco, advanced to the quarter-finals of a $25,000 tennis tournament with a 6-4, 6-3, victory over Wendy Barlow, of Victoria.

Louie, the highest remaining seed in the 32-player event, fell behind 2-4 in the first set but managed to rattle off four straight games for a 6-4 advantage.

In the second set, Barlow, 18, tried to play a serve and volley game but Louie, staying in the backcourt, passed her repeatedly for an easy 6-3 win.

In other matches, Ottawa's Marjorie Blackwood reached the quarter-finals with a 6-2, 3-6, 6-3 victory over Jane Stratton, of Salt Lake City, Utah. Blackwood, 21, outhit Stratton, who earlier had defeated third-seeded Hana Strachonova, to win the third set by one service break.

St. Michael's Still Unbeaten

St. Michael's University School is off and running with an impressive streak in the young Greater Victoria High School Rugby League season.

St. Michael's pushed its record to 3-0 and remained unscored on by blanking Spectrum 29-0 while Oak Bay Barbarians came up with their first win of the season — a 24-3 romp over Mt. Douglas Mountainmen — in games Wednesday.

Tom Todesco scored two tries and Ross MacLean added a try and kicked a penalty goal and a convert to lead St. Michael's, which now has an 88-0 points for-and-against record. Wim Vanderspek and Duncan Lee added single four-pointers for the Howard Russell Division leaders.

TOSHIBA

That's right — we had dozens and dozens, but these fine Toshiba receivers are almost gone. Toshiba claims 50 watts per channel but we've measured them as high as 64 watts! And, Toshiba guarantees distortion below 0.3% (but our tests show typical figures around 0.03% and as low as 0.018%!)

These are last year's models, and originally sold as high as $529.00, and our best discount price was $449. Don't wait! We have only a small supply left. Also available are some of Toshiba's 25 and 40 watt models.

Naturally, we'll give you top dollar for your old set, and our famous 7-year written guarantee.

Fulham Stays In Cup Picture

LONDON (Reuter) — Manchester United, winners two years ago, were held to a 1-1 draw by Second Division Fulham Wednesday night in their rearranged fourth-round Football Association Cup match.

Jimmy Greenhoff put the Manchester club ahead six minutes before the interval. England striker Stuart Pearson, who had set up the goal, was later carried off hurt. It was only his second match after undergoing surgery on a knee.

By then, Fulham had drawn level with a header from John Margerrison.

Everton lost a chance to leapfrog to the top of the championship standings when held to a 1-1 draw by Aston Villa in a league match. Only a late goal by Dave Thomas saved the Merseyside club from its first home League defeat since Christmas, 1977.

The result hoists Everton above neighboring Liverpool, but leaves it behind West Bromwich on goal difference. Neither Liverpool nor West Bromwich played Wednesday night.

PCs again Blast 'Invasion'

OTTAWA (CP) - James McGrath renewed Conservative attempts Wednesday to stop a Statistics Canada survey which asks consumers how much toilet paper and lingerie they bought last year, among other things.

McGrath, his party's social affairs critic, said the survey represents an unwarranted invasion of privacy and must be withdrawn.

Industry Minister Jack Horner, who speaks for the statistical agency in Parliament, said in an interview he still is awaiting more information about the survey before making any decision to cancel it.

He denied Conservative allegations that the 45-page statistical questionaire is put to every 28th recipient of family allowance.

On Tuesday Conservative Bill Kempling asked Horner to stop the 45-page survey immediately on grounds that it amounted to the most "massive invasion of personal privacy by any government in the western world."

Kempling told reporters he had been informed that persons could be forced to answer personal questions about family income, debts, bank balances and how much was spent on personal hygiene products, kitchen utensils and underwear.

A Statistics Canada spokesman said Wednesday 13,500 families were randomly selected from urban and rural areas and that the agency had been conducting a similar survey every two years since 1949.

While the department can take legal action, "we work with people who are likely to volunteer the information," said Jenny Podoluk, director general for the household statistics branch.

Miss Podoluk said such surveys are necessary to construct the consumer price index — the common economic indicator for the change in the cost of living.

"In order to decide what commodities and what weight should be given to spending patterns, we need the detailed information."

Horner said the business community needs specific information obtained in such surveys.

"I can think of one crazy example. For example, what did Pampers (a disposable diaper product) do for the paper industry? They increased the amount of paper manufactured."

The minister said since the number of surveys conducted by Statistics Canada will be reduced in the coming year because of budget restraints, the business community has suggested they might even pay for them.

The current survey on household expenditures is costing about $1 million, Miss Podoluk said.

"I don't know of any countries which have a consumer price index which does not have these surveys."

LANGUAGE GHETTOS FEARED BY GRITS

OTTAWA (CP) — Twelve Liberals, including two cabinet ministers, have condemned the Task Force on National Unity's recommendation that protection of minority language rights should be entrusted to the provinces.

This would lead to the creation of "ghettos of deprivation and despair," the MPs said in a letter distributed to reporters Wednesday.

"We cannot, we must not, we shall not accept those recommendations based on pessimism," the letter said.

The MPs say linguistic rights of minorities must be enshrined in the constitution, as Prime Minister Trudeau has proposed. He said last week that it would be "dead wrong" to leave minority language protection up to the provinces.

Consumer Affairs Minister Warren Allmand and five other English-speaking MPs from Quebec signed the letter.

So did Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais, who represents a French-speaking Northern Ontario riding, and three other Ontario MPs whose ridings have a large French-speaking population.

They were joined by Eymard Corbin and Maurice Dionne from New Brunswick.

If the recommendations of the Pepin-Robarts commission were accepted, "many of these groups, other than those in Quebec and New Brunswick, would be subjected to irrevocable assimilation," the MPs.

"Furthermore, the English-speaking people of Quebec would lose their acquired rights."

The MPs say that fundamental rights must be guaranteed to all Canadians across the country, "if there is to be a country called Canada."

Protection and promotion of individual and collective rights and freedoms must be sheltered from the political and legislative whims of the federal and provincial governments of the day, they say.

Cabbies Locked In Trunks

EDMONTON (CP) — Two cab drivers were locked in the trunks of their cars Wednesday night in two separate heists by an armed duo, police said.

The first driver, with Yellow Cab Ltd., was released unharmed after 20 minutes when a shopper at the Bonnie Doon shopping mall heard his cries for help.

Police said the driver picked up the two men at a downtown hotel. They produced a handgun and a knife, took some cash and then locked the driver in the trunk.

The second driver, with City Cab, was beaten by the robbers but managed to set himself free before being taken to hospital, a police spokesman said.

Autoplan '79 PROTECTION PLUS SERVICE '79

DOES YOUR VEHICLE QUALIFY FOR A 1979 AUTOPLAN SAFE DRIVING VEHICLE DISCOUNT?

Chances are it does.

This year, some 80% of all private passenger and light commercial vehicle owners will earn safe driving vehicle discounts worth about $90,000,000. So, being careful can save money as well as lives.

Read the questions and answers below. If your vehicle qualifies and has a claim-free record for one year, it is eligible for a 15% discount; for two years, a 25% discount; for three years, a 32.5% discount.

If your Autoplan renewal form doesn't show a discount, and you think your vehicle is eligible, check with your Autoplan Agent or Motor Licence Office.

Why a Safe Driving VEHICLE Discount rather than a Safe DRIVER Discount?

Because this program is designed to encourage safe driving and to emphasize that vehicle owners are responsible for the safe operation of their vehicles at all times, no matter who is driving.

Will ANY accident count against me?

Not necessarily. Eligibility for a discount is not affected by a hit-and-run claim, a no-fault accident benefit claim, claims against Comprehensive or Specified Perils coverage. Otherwise, any claim for which payment has been made for collision, property damage or bodily injury disqualifies your vehicle.

How are the discounts calculated?

1. The 32.5% three-year discount is deducted from your premium if your vehicle has a claim-free record from October 1, 1975 to September 30, 1978. You must also have paid basic Autoplan insurance premiums for a minimum of six months during each of the years March 1, 1978 to February 28, 1979; March 1, 1977 to February 28, 1978 and for one month during March 1, 1976 to February 28, 1977.

2. The 25% two-year discount is deducted from your premium if your vehicle has a claim-free record from October 1, 1976 to September 30, 1978. You must also have paid basic Autoplan insurance premiums for a minimum of six months during each of the years March 1, 1978 to February 28, 1979 and March 1, 1977 to February 28, 1978.

3. The 15% one-year discount is deducted from your premium if your vehicle has a claim-free record from October 1, 1977 to September 30, 1978. You must also have paid basic Autoplan insurance premiums for a minimum of six months during the year March 1, 1978 to February 28, 1979.

Are Safe Driving Vehicle Discounts Transferrable?

Yes, in certain circumstances. For example, they may be transferred:

1. from an eligible vehicle to a replacement vehicle, even if the licence number plates change;

2. when vehicle ownership changes within a family, for example between husband and wife or between parent and child, provided the principal operator remains the same;

3. if the vehicle registration is transferred from an individual's name to a company name, or vice versa, provided the individual owns at least 95% of the company;

4. from a vehicle leased from one company to a vehicle leased from another company, provided the previous lease operator is willing to forfeit the discount earned on that vehicle;

5. from a leased vehicle on which a contract has been terminated to a vehicle purchased by the lessee, provided that person was shown as the lessee on the registration, and the lease operator is willing to forfeit the discount earned on the leased vehicle;

6. from a privately owned vehicle to a leased vehicle provided the lessee is named as such on the new registration.

Are there any exclusions from the Safe Driving Vehicle Discount?

Yes, a few. For example:

1. vehicle owners who are indebted to the Insurance Corporation;

2. special coverage policies or premiums, with the exception of a Special Coverage Policy for Motorcycle Own Damage Insurance;

3. vehicles which are part of a fleet in 1979 or were part of a fleet in 1978;

4. vehicles insured under a Comprehensive Garage Policy in 1978 or 1979.

If you have any questions about the eligibility of your vehicle, consult your Autoplan Agent or Motor Licence Office.

Federal Action Urged On Lumber Price Hikes

By RON CLINGEN
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — NDP Leader Ed Broadbent urged the government Wednesday to take steps to head off an impending 20-per-cent jump in lumber prices which he warned will add at least $1,200 to the price of the average Canadian home.

Broadbent said lumber prices soared by 40 per cent last year and 20 per cent the year before. Another 20 per cent increase this year, he reasoned, would produce an 80-per-cent price hike over three years.

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Warren Allmand said he would be prepared to ask companies to hold their prices down if he thought it was warranted, but said he wanted to look at the facts first.

Allmand said members of his own Liberal caucus had raised similar complaints with him. He said he had consequently started an inquiry into the situation but at the present time was not sure where it would lead.

"It may be possible to talk to the leaders of this industry if there appear to be unwarranted profits or price increases, but I want to look into this before I make any judgment on the question," Allmand told the Commons.

Broadbent claimed profits being reaped by companies in the lumber industry are at "an almost all-time high," ranging up to 358 per cent.

And Broadbent noted that if a Canadian worker could get an 80-per-cent increase over three years "he would be very happy."

Allmand, however, said he could not accept Broadbent's figures for the past year or two, adding he was suspicious of information given to the House by the NDP leader because he had "often found it to be incorrect."

Broadbent instantly challenged the minister to name one inaccurate statistic he had quoted in the House "and if there is one I will publicly accept this criticism and correct the inaccuracy."

Allmand ignored the challenge.

On Tuesday, Allmand promised to look at food profits, now running at 19 per cent. He made the same promise two months ago when MPs were arguing about turkey prices and shortages.

Jobless Cheques Up 17%

OTTAWA (CP) — The government paid 17 per cent more in unemployment benefits during the first 11 months of 1978 than for the same period one year earlier.

The federal agency said the average weekly payment during its survey period increased by nine per cent to $109.35 from $100.59 in 1977.

Monthly statistics for November showed $333 million paid, an increase of 15 per cent from the October total and a five-per-cent increase from the figure for November, 1977.

Guilt Beats Robber

TORONTO (CP) — A former accountant who said he successfully robbed two banks and an insurance company turned himself in to police last December because his conscience was bothering him.

"I just wanted to get it over with," Joseph Larry Lemieux testified in county court Tuesday. "I know I have it coming to me."

The 31-year-old Montreal man pleaded guilty to stealing $7,000 from the safe of a Toronto insurance firm where he was employed in 1977.

Testimony showed he then went to Vancouver where he robbed a bank of $2,700 and later returned to Toronto where he robbed a trust company of $1,700.

He pleaded guilty to all offences.

He was remanded to Feb. 28 for sentencing.

Killed in Bar

IRUN, Spain (AP) — A retired national policeman was killed by three men who shot him Wednesday in the bar he owned in this Basque town on the French border. Felix Diego Martinez, 47, was the second man killed by persons believed to be members of ETA, the Basque independence organization, within 24 hours.

Old War Wounds Opened

OTTAWA (CP) — Old wounds from the conscription crisis of the Second World War were opened Wednesday in the Commons as Social Credit MPs accused English Canadians of being responsible for the "butcher" of Quebecers.

"Our French boys were used as a buffer to protect the anglophones," said Charles-Arthur Gauthier, Social Credit parliamentary leader.

"Over 4,000 of our young people (Quebecers) were butchered in the battlefield," Gauthier said in an emotional speech during debate on a bill permitting the government to hold referendums on constitutional issues.

Richard Janelle, another Social Credit MP from Quebec, said the bill, if implemented, will lead to the same "confrontations between anglophones and francophones" as did the wartime referendum on conscription.

Janelle reminded the Commons that 75 per cent of Quebecers had voted against conscription but 80 per cent of all Canadians supported it.

The tough Social Credit stance represented a switch in attitude by the nine-member group in the Commons. At the start of the debate it was indicated they would support the government. Now they have joined the Conservatives in strongly opposing the bill which the latter say is too broad and which will permit the government to hold referendums on a wide variety of matters, eroding responsible government in Canada.

Communications Minister Jeanne Sauve paraphrased the slogan by saying: "Referendums if necessary but not necessarily referendums."

Government spokesman earlier said they had expected the debate on the bill to end Monday but several Quebec MPs from all parties have demanded more time for debate.

Opposition MPs from Quebec say the government should forget the bill and concentrate on economic issues — the problems, they say, Canadians want ironed out first.

"Canadians are not interested in the constitution," said Eudore Allard, another social arbiter.

Roch LaSalle, Quebec Progressive Conservative, concurred.

"The real needs of Canadians are still bread-and-butter issues."

The MPs accused the Liberal government of creating a national unity crisis, along with an economic crisis, and responding only with a referendum.

Former solicitor-general Francis Fox, another Quebec MP, denied the charge. The proposed referendum as not the government's solution to national disunity.

Trudeau has said everything is negotiable with Quebec except the maintenance of the federation and basic human rights, Fox said.

As in the previous days of debate on the bill, the atmosphere in the Commons was highly partisan.

Later, Quebec Liberal Ian Watson emphasized that the government considers its referendum legislation "only a tool."

"We need it as a tool to keep the Quebec referendum honest."

Valence Files Kidnap Appeal

MONTREAL (CP) — Claude Valence, serving a six-year prison term for attempted extortion in the Charles Marion kidnapping case, filed an appeal of his conviction and sentence in the Quebec Court of Appeal Wednesday.

Lawyer Jean-Pierre Rancourt also filed for Valence's release on bail pending the appeal's outcome. A bail hearing was set for Feb. 8.

"It can take from five to six months for the court to hear the appeal," said Rancourt. "My client should be freed at least until then."

The appeal will be based on the grounds that publicity surrounding Valence's trial clouded the objectivity of Superior Court Justice Marc Beauregard, the lawyer said, noting that the 53-year-old former game warden is the married father of three and has no previous criminal record.

Crown prosecutor Pierre Sauve has already appealed Valence's acquittal by a Superior Court jury earlier this month on charges of conspiracy to kidnap, kidnapping, forcible detention and extortion.

Three other persons charged in connection with the 82-kidnapping of the Sherbrooke, Que., credit union employee are expected to face trial this spring.

PM Cool To Vote

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau attempted Wednesday to cool Liberal party enthusiasm for an immediate election, saying he wants no campaign "in the slush and the ice."

Sources said he gave no hints at a private luncheon meeting of MPs and about 100 newly-nominated Liberal candidates when he'll call this year's long-anticipated election.

But as he waited to enter the luncheon he told The Canadian Press: "We don't want to have an election in the slush and the ice."

Senior party campaign strategists confirmed later that there appears general opposition in Trudeau's office to a winter campaign. Although there have been previous general elections in all months but May, politicians tend to dislike winter campaigns because of the problems of travelling and canvassing in the snow.

There has been some speculation that Trudeau might use a constitutional conference with provincial premiers early next week as a springboard for an election call.

If he did, the election would take place in early April following the usual 60-day campaign.

Senator Al Graham, Liberal party president accompanying Trudeau, said the party is "ready any time" for the election the prime minister has promised during the first half of the year.

Candidates agreed.

"I've never seen so much hope," said rookie Paul Manning, candidate in the British Columbia riding of Vancouver Quadra.

Jamieson Scores Tories

OTTAWA (UPC) — Gearing his party up for the next election, External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson has lambasted the Conservatives for threatening the country with indecision and lightening-rod politics.

"They say they will cut 60,000 jobs in the public service or about 20 per cent in three years. But they tell Ottawa voters no one will be hurt or fired while they tell the rest of the country service to the public won't be cut," Jamieson told 100 Liberal candidates at a party workshop Wednesday.

He thundered that it isn't good enough for Conservative leader Joe Clark to say it is time for a change.

"But a change to what? We have been pretty generous in this government with grants for on-the-job training but, by God, that doesn't extend to the Prime Minister's office."

"Pin down your Conservative opponents during the election campaign. Ask them how the party plans to cut the public service. Ask them about the deficit," the minister urged a his cheering audience.

Dead Man Testifies

DAUPHIN, Man. (CP) — An arson conviction against a Dauphin man Tuesday may be the first such case in which statements of a dead man were admitted as evidence, says Crown counsel Stu Whitley of Winnipeg.

Armand Lussier was sentenced to three years imprisonment Tuesday by County Court Judge Walter Barichuk and the written statement of a dead man was the only strong evidence introduced.

The arson charge was laid in connection with a house fire in the rural municipality of Shell River near Roblin, Man., Nov. 9, 1977.

William Dumont, 42, suffered severe burns in the fire and died about two weeks later. Before he died, he made statements to police in which he said Lussier hired him to set the blaze.

Opening lead - king of clubs.

You wouldn't think that the order in which declarer played his diamonds would make a difference in the outcome of this deal. But, actually, South managed to confuse the issue by his unusual sequence of diamond plays and he made the slam as a result.

West led the king of clubs. Declarer won with the ace and cashed the A-K of trumps, East showing out. This unlucky development obviously placed the slam in jeopardy, since West now had a sure trump trick and a potential club winner also.

Declarer almost certainly would have gone down had he tried to cash his diamonds at this juncture in an effort to discard two clubs from dummy. All he needed for this method of play to succeed was for West to have more than two diamonds.

But South was not inclined to rely on only this one possibility. He decided to disguise his actual diamond holding so that he'd have a chance for the slam even if West had only two diamonds.

Accordingly, at trick four, he led a spade to the king, returned a diamond and "finessed" the queen. He wanted to sell West the idea that East had the king. South then cashed the ace of diamonds and continued with the jack.

If West had ruffed and led the queen of clubs, it would have been the end of the line for South. But West had been mesmerized into thinking that East had the king of diamonds. Therefore West discarded a club, and so did dummy.

West's discard proved fatal when South now led the king of diamonds and disposed of dummy's last club. The only trick South lost was a trump.

It is easy to blame West for the outcome, but the fact remains that South should get credit for doing everything possible to mislead West.

SOOTHING SEMINARS FOR EXECS

By JIM ROBB
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal government is organizing seminars to help its senior officials cope with the strains of media interviews but the bureaucrat in charge of setting up the sessions isn't keen on talking to reporters.

Camille Richard, of the Public Service Commission, terminated a short interview with an enquiring reporter Wednesday when he was asked what the response of senior bureaucrats had been to the seminar, scheduled for early February. He referred the reporter to his superior.

Richard's boss revealed later in the day that 26 had signed up, so the seminar will be held on two days instead of the one day originally scheduled because the PSC likes to keep such groups small in size.

The registration notice for the one-day seminar, which costs $150 a head, noted that media interviews "impose considerable stress and strain on senior executives and many feel ill prepared for this type of work."

"With proper training, particularly through simulation exercises," the jangled nerves of bureaucrats confronted by nosy reporters can be soothed, the notice suggested.

"Due to increasing demands placed on senior mangement by the ...media, many senior executives must comply with requests for media interviews...pertaining to new programs or cutbacks on existing programs."

Delivering a pitch on "The Art of Being Interviewed," at the seminar will be Robert W. George, an Ottawa "media and employment" consultant, who runs Canogara Consulting Ltd.

He was an assistant to C.M. Drury, when the chairman of the National Capital Commission was public works minister from 1974 to 1976.

George said that based on the amount of preparation he figures to lose about a $1,000 on the two days he will spend talking to the directors-general and assistant deputy ministers. The PSC officials wouldn't say what they are paying George.

George is hoping the success of the seminars will lead to more business in the future.

The Lazy Man's Way to Riches

'Most People Are Too Busy Earning a Living to Make Any Money'

". . . I didn't have a job and I was worse than broke. I owed more than $50,000 and my only assets were my wife and 8 children. We were renting an old house in a decaying neighborhood, driving a 5-year old car that was falling apart, and had maybe a couple of hundred dollars in the bank.

Within one month, after using the principles of the Lazy Man's Way to Riches, things started to change — to put it mildly.

- We worked out a plan we could afford to pay off our debts — and stopped our creditors from hounding us.
- We were driving a brand-new Thunderbird that a car dealer had given to us!
- Our bank account had multiplied tenfold!
- All within the first 30 days!

- I live in a home that's worth over $250,000.
- I own my "office". It's about a mile and a half from my home and is right on the beach.
- I own a lakefront "cabin" in Washington. (That's where we spend the whole summer — loafing, fishing, swimming and sailing.)
- I own two oceanfront condominiums. One is on a sunny beach in Mexico and one is snuggled right on the best beach of the best island in Hawaii. — Maui.
- I have two boats and a Cadillac. All paid for.
- I have a net worth of over a Million Dollars. But I still don't have a job . . ."

I used to work hard. The 18-hour days. The 7-day weeks.

For example, this ad took about 2 hours to write. With a little luck, it should earn me 50, maybe a hundred thousand dollars.

What's more, I'm going to ask you to send me 10 dollars for something that'll cost me no more than 50 cents. And I'll try to make it so irresistible that you'd be a darned fool not to do it.

After all, why should you care if I make $9.50 profit if I can show you how to make a lot more?

What if I'm so sure that you will make money my Lazy Man's Way that I'll make you a most unusual guarantee?

And here it is: I won't even cash your check or money order for 31 days after I've sent you my material.

If you don't agree that it's worth at least a hundred times what you invested, send it back. Your uncashed check or money order will be put in the return mail.

The only reason I won't send it to you and bill you or send it C.O.D. is because both these methods involve more time and money.

And I'm already going to give you the biggest bargain of your life.

Because I'm going to tell you what it took me 11 years to perfect: How to make money the Lazy Man's Way.

O.K.—now I have to brag a little. I don't mind it. And it's necessary—to prove that sending me the 10 dollars . . . which I'll keep "in escrow" until you're satisfied . . . is the smartest thing you ever did.

I live in a home that's worth $250,000. I know it is, because I turned down an offer for that much. My mortgage is less than half that, and the only reason I haven't paid it off is because my Tax Accountant says I'd be an idiot.

My "office," about a mile and a half from my home, is right on the beach. My view is so breathtaking that most people comment that they don't see how I get any work done. But I do enough. About 6 hours a day, 8 or 9 months a year.

The rest of the time we spend at our mountain "cabin." I paid $30,000 for it—cash.

I have 2 boats and a Cadillac. All paid for.

We have stocks, bonds, investments, cash in the bank. But the most important thing I have is priceless: time with my family.

And I'll show you just how I did it—the Lazy Man's Way—a secret that I've shared with just a few friends 'til now.

It doesn't require "education." I'm a high school graduate.

It doesn't require "capital." When I started out, I was so deep in debt that a lawyer friend advised bankruptcy as the only way out. He was wrong. We paid off our debts and, outside of the mortgage, don't owe a cent to any man.

It doesn't require "luck." I've had more than my share, but I'm not promising you that you'll make as much money as I have. And you may do better; I personally know one man who used these principles, worked hard, and made 11 million dollars in 8 years. But money isn't everything.

It doesn't require "talent." Just enough brains to know what to look for. And I'll tell you that.

It doesn't require "youth." One woman I worked with is over 70. She's travelled the world over, making all the money she needs, doing only what I taught her.

It doesn't require "experience." A widow in Chicago has been averaging $25,000 a year for the past 5 years, using my methods.

What does it require? Belief. Enough to take a chance. Enough to absorb what I'll send you. Enough to put the principles into action. If you do just that—nothing more, nothing less—the results will be hard to believe. Remember—I guarantee it.

You don't have to give up your job. But you may soon be making so much money that you'll be able to. Once again—I guarantee it.

The wisest man I ever knew told me something I never forgot: "Most people are too busy earning a living to make any money."

Don't take as long as I did to find out he was right.

Here are some comments from other people. I'm sure that, like you, they didn't believe me either. Guess they figured that, since I wasn't going to deposit their check for 31 days, they had nothing to lose.

$260,000 in eleven months

"Two years ago, I mailed you ten dollars in sheer desperation for a better life . . . One year ago, just out of the blue sky, a man called and offered me a partnership . . . I grossed over $260,000 cash business in eleven months. You are a God sent miracle to me."

B. F., Pascagoula, Miss.

Banking deposits from zero to thousands

"It is all I can do to get to the bank with one wheelbarrow! I'm just going to have to get a second one to accommodate the volume . . . Since December, until the present time, I have built my business from zero up to where some days, my banking deposits are in excess of thousands."

D. J. A., Westminster, Calif.

Made $16,901.92 first time out

"The third day I applied myself totally to what you had shown me. I made $16,901.92. That's great results for my first time out."

J. J. M., Watertown, N.Y.

'I'm a half-millionaire'

"Thanks to your method, I'm a half-millionaire . . . would you believe last year at this time I was a slave working for peanuts?"

G. C., Toronto, Canada

Getting everything we want

"We can't keep this to ourselves anymore — you were right! We're on the road to getting all (everything) we want in this world! We sold the $17,000 house we had and got another one . . . It's worth $65,000. We have a paid-for Ford pickup, paid-for 17 ft. boat, we bought a Cadillac, we have a paid-for Grand Prix . . ."

Mrs. M. C., Anaheim, Calif.

$7,000 in five days

"Last Monday I used what I learned on page 83 to make $7,000. It took me all week to do it, but that's not bad for five day's work."

M. D., Topeka, Kansas

Can't believe success

"I can't believe how successful I have become. . . . Three months ago, I was a telephone order taker for a fastener company in Chicago, Illinois. I was driving a beat-up 1959 Rambler and had about $600 in my savings account. Today, I am the outside salesman for the same fastener company. I'm driving a company car . . . I am sitting in my own office and have about $3,000 in my savings account."

G. M., Des Plaines, Ill.

I know you're skeptical. After all, what I'm saying is probably contrary to what you've heard from your friends, your family, your teachers and maybe everyone else you know. I can only ask you one question.

How many of them are millionaires?

So it's up to you:

A month from today, you can be nothing more than 30 days older — or you can be on your way to getting rich. You decide.

Joe, you may be full of beans, but what have I got to lose? Send me the Lazy Man's Way to Riches. But don't deposit my check or money order for 31 days after it's in the mail.

Now's the Time for Pork

With more pork available during the next few months, it's a good time to become better acquainted with the various cuts so that one can look for good buys.

Shoulder roasts are the lowest priced pork roasts. The picnic shoulder comes from the lower part of the shoulder. It contains a round bone which may be removed leaving a pocket for stuffing. The shoulder butt, from the upper part of the shoulder, contains a portion of the blade bone which may be removed and has a thin layer of surface fat. Both cuts may be stuffed before roasting.

Shoulder chops are the least expensive of the pork chops, but with more fat and sinew than the loin chops. Blade chops contain a portion of blade bone while shoulder chops contain a small round bone and are finer grained and more meaty.

The pork loin is cut in three sections: leg end, centre cut and rib end. A loin roast is one of the more expensive roasts, and is usually sold as rib and loin chops.

Pork tenderloin, the highest priced cut is usually served on a very special occasion. It's a long, tapering, very slender, tender piece of lean meat from the loin, sold in one piece or sliced.

The leg may be left whole or divided into shank and butt. It is a meaty cut with a small amount of bone, usually sold with the bone in. A centre cut steak may be cut from the leg. It is oval in shape with a small round bone and is tender and meaty.

Pork spareribs include back and side ribs. Back ribs have more meat in proportion to bone than the side ribs and are therefore more expensive. Country-style spareribs have a higher proportion of meat, less fat and less bone and are often cooked as a roast.

A pork stew may be a welcome change to a beef stew, using stewing meat from the neck, the breast and the shank. Ground pork compares favorably with ground beef and may be used in almost as many ways — burgers, loaves and pies.

All pork cuts are tender enough for roasting, broiling and barbecuing. Food consultants at Agriculture Canada recommend cooking pork in a 160 deg. C (325 deg. F) oven to an internal temperature of either 80 deg. C (170 deg. F) or 90 deg. C (185 deg. F) on a meat thermometer. In both cases, the meat is well done. At 90 deg. C the pork is less juicy than at 80 deg C but is more tender.

Following is a tested recipe for Tangy Pineapple Pork from Food Advisory Divison. Over cooked rice, it's a no-miss way to serve cooked pork.

TANGY PINEAPPLE PORK

500 ml cubed cooked pork
25 ml fat
1 can (540 ml) pineapple tidbits
300 ml syrup from pineapple, plus water
250 ml chicken bouillon
50 ml vinegar
25 ml soy sauce
1 green pepper, cut in 3 cm pieces
25 ml cornstarch
25 ml water.

Brown meat in fat. Drain off excess fat. Drain pineapple; reserve syrup. Combine syrup plus water, bouillon, vinegar and soy sauce. Add meat and simmer 15 min. Add green pepper. Combine cornstarch and water; add to pan. Stir and cook until thick and clear. Add pineapple and heat 5 min. more. Serve over cooked rice, if desired. 6 servings.

Kumin with some of his delicacies

Fat Problem For Carters

By MIMI SHERATON

NEW YORK (NYT) — Keeping the presidential waistline as trim as necessary to maintain the currently acceptable public image may soon become one of the problems facing the Carter adminstration, if not the entire Carter household.

Starting today the White House bakery is in the capable and magical hands of the 59-year-old Swiss-born pastry chef, Albert Kumin. During the past 20 years, it was Kumin who created many of New York's most irresistible, high-caloric temptations in the breads and croissants, pastries and cakes, confections, sorbets and souffles that he produced for at least a dozen of the city's best-known restaurants.

A slim, fair-haired man with twinkling blue eyes, huge, powerful hands and a shy smile that hints at embarrassment whenever he is complimented, Kumin admitted to being excited about his new position.

"As far as my career is concerned, it is the icing on the cake," he said, appropriately enough.

MUSHROOMS LYONNAISE

1 lb. mushrooms, trimmed and sliced
¼ cup chopped green onions
1 tbsp. chopped parsley
1 tsp. lemon juice

¼ cup butter

Place mushrooms on an 18-inch square of double thickness, heavy-duty foil. Sprinkle with green onions, parsley, and lemon juice. Season with salt and pepper. Dot with butter. Wrap securely in foil. Place on grill 5 inches from medium coals. Cook for approx. 10 minutes on each side or until done.

Delicious with steak, chicken or turkey.

Meatless Emperor's Macaroni

1½ tsp. salt
⅓ cup melted butter or margarine
⅔ cup soft breadcrumbs

Can halt baldness Finnish scientists say

LONDON—Two Finnish scientists said they have developed a scalp treatment that can halt baldness and even start new hair growing in many cases.

The scientists, who are putting the treatment on sale in the form of a solution, say that among volunteers who applied it to their scalp for 28 weeks, hair growth resumed in 60 per cent of the cases and hair loss decreased within four weeks.

The product called Bioscal contains a synthetic detergent, which clears away dead hairs and other dirt clogging the follicles — the tiny sacs in which hair grows.

Another ingredient, a compound, then sets in motion a process which allegedly results in the growth of new hair.

No Magic in Honey

QUESTION: Many people promote honey for good health. Does it have special properties which make it good for you?

ANSWER: Honey does not contain any magic substance. Honey consists primarily of simple sugars which are similar to those found in cane and beet sugars. All three forms of carbohydrate provide mainly calories or energy, and very little in the way of nutrients. Aside from the carbohydrate, honey provides a very small amount of iron. However, one would need to eat over five tablespoons of honey (310 calories) to obtain .9 mg. of iron — the amount found in one medium egg yolk. Nutritionally speaking, the difference between honey and sugar is minimal. It would be best to limit your intake of both.

QUESTION: I have found this column helpful but where can I get more information? Can you recommend a good book on nutrition?

ANSWER: There are many excellent sources of nutrition information available throughout the province. Contact your local health unit for a copy of the Directory of Community Nutrition Services. The B.C. Nutrition Council, P.O. Box 35141, Station E, Vancouver, B.C. V6M 4L1, produces a list of recommended nutrition books. The first book on the list, The Family Guide to Better Food and Better Health by Ronald Deutsch, is a helpful general guide. Ask for it at the library.

Contact your local health unit or health department for copies of Canada's Food Guide and its handbook which explains how to interpret the food guide. The publication Good Eating to Guard Your Heart, availble from the same source, also has information on good nutrition. All nutrition publications from the health unit are free.

QUESTION: I have a teenager who insists on eating organically grown food, but I find it is more expensive. She said that she would give it up if there is any proof that commercial chemicals are not harmful. Is there?

ANSWER: All food is organic and needs certain nutrients or chemicals in order to grow. As the science of food technology expands, it tends to use the chemical names of substances rather than the more familiar names. These chemical names on packages may frighten people more than necessary.

It is still wise to be aware of unnecessary additives in our foods. Some additives have been necessary to help us maintain a consistent food supply throughout the year in a country which does not have a year-round growing season. Additives used solely for cosmetic or appearance purposes are the most controversial. Most unnecessary additives may be avoided by buying plain unprocessed foods in the supermarket and by avoiding quick, instant convenience foods.

Whole Grain Items Vary

Food for Thought

By Dr. Jean Mayer and Dr. Johanna Dwyer

Q. Nutritionists are telling us to eat more whole grains. But beyond whole wheat bread, I'm not sure what they mean by the term whole grain. Can you please help me?

A. Whole grains include all cereals — wheat, corn, rice, oats, rye and barley. Wheat is, of course, the most popular. However, whole grains are available in many forms other than whole wheat bread.

There are a variety of cereals (including hot or cold whole wheat cereals), whole wheat muffins, and any number of crackers, including various whole wheat wafers as well as graham crackers.

A less widely known but very tasty whole wheat food, bulgar (sometimes called parboiled wheat), is available in specialty sections of the supermarket. It can be cooked with broth and served in place of potatoes. Barley, used most commonly in soups, can also be prepared in this manner.

Dark rye, pumpernickel and oatmeal breads and hot oatmeal are also excellent whole grain choices. There is also whole grain or brown rice. Most corn meal and baked corn enjoy baking and would like to use whole-grain cornmeal, it is also available in the increasing number of stores that now sell whole grain flours of all types in bulk.

In recent years, many people have begun to enjoy baking their own whole grain breads using combinations of grains. Cookbooks are now available with recipes for numerous varieties of yeast-raised and quick whole grain loaves.

Using more whole grains not only will improve your intake of vitamins, minerals and fiber but also will greatly enhance the variety of a flavors and textures in your diet, making eating a more pleasurable experience.

Q. If I understood your recent column correctly, there apparently is little scientific support for the Feingold diet as a treatment for hyperactivity. But didn't I hear a news report recently about a new study?

A. The results of the most rigidly controlled and comprehensive study reported to date appeared in a recent issue of Pediatrics, the journal of the American Academy of Pediatrics. In the study, which was conducted by a team of investigators from the University of Wisconsin and Northwestern University Children's Memorial Hospital in Chicago, no drugs were allowed and strict criteria were used to determine hyperactivity. The entire family's food supply was provided by the study team, including supplementary foods for special events. Dietitians made weekly home visits to insure compliance with the diet.

A total of 46 children — 36 between the ages of six and 12, and 10 between the ages of three and six — were assigned to either an experimental or a control group. The experimental group received the Feingold diet, in which all naturally occurring and added salicylates, synthetic food dyes and artificial flavors are removed. The control group received a diet that looked the same but contained ordinary amounts of these substances. Neither the families nor the investigators knew which children were receiving the test diet.

The most important point that the investigators found was that, with the possible exception of a small sample of preschoolers on whom only limited data were obtained, the results did not provide convincing support for the effectiveness of the diet.

At present, the same team is completing the second phase of the study, in which children who appeared most responsive to dietary modification are given either large doses of artifical colors and flavors or placebos. The results of this study and others now in progress should provide enough information to determine conclusively whether certain food additives play a role in the development and/or continuation of hyperactive behavior.

Mustard Cuts It as No. 2 among Spices

craig claiborne

Of course you know that black pepper is the most widely used spice in North America today. But if you were to hazard a guess as to the second ranking spice, the chances are that you'd be wrong.

It isn't oregano, used with abandon on pizza pies coast to coast. It isn't the bay leaves or thyme that are tossed into a few hundred thousand soups and stews each day of the year. It is mustard, which is to hot dogs and salad dressing what ice cream is to a cone and a pickle is to pastrami.

Through the centuries, there have been a surprising lot of literary references to mustard, beginning with the Bible: "If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove;" and "The Kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard seed."

Shakespeare made frequent reference to mustard. In Henry V, Part II, Falstaff says, "He's a good wit! hand him, baboon! His wit's as thick as Tewksbury mustard." And, in The Taming of the Shrew, "What say you to a piece of beef and mustard?"

One of the most interesting and curious terms in the English language is to cut the mustard. It means to accomplish something in an expert manner; to score, to gain respect. In early days, "the proper mustard" meant something genuine and not watered down.

Mustard has been used since antiquity as a healing device for everything from headaches and the common cold to a bad case of the vapors and spider attacks.

It is purely subjective, but I have my own theories that mustards vary from region to region and that each mustard has a special affinity for certain foods that, in general, are also regional.

Such French mustard as that of Dijon or Meaux, bearing such names as Grey Poupon, Maille, Pikarome, Pommery and so on, go especially well with such foods a la francaise as roast leg of lamb, French charcuterie such as saucisson a l'ail, or garlic sausages, French style, andouillettes (chitterling sausages), boudin noir (blood sausages) and so on.

And it is present in mayonnaise sauces of French origin (most are); half the world's mustards are produced in Dijon.

The bright yellow mustard, whose color is due to the addition of turmeric, has no challengers when it comes to something to smear on hot dogs.

Finally, the ideal condiment for roast beef, English style, is freshly made mustard paste made from English-made powdered mustard. This paste should be allowed to stand before using.

MUSTARD MAYONNAISE MEAUX-STYLE

1 egg yolk
2 tablespoons imported mustard such as moutarde de Meaux, Dijon or Dusseldorf
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1½ teaspoon vinegar
1 cup peanut, vegetable or corn oil
1 tablespoon finely chopped chives
Lemon juice to taste, optional

1. Combine the yolk, half the mustard, salt, pepper and vinegar in a mixing bowl.
2. Beat the mixture with a wire whisk until blended. Gradually add the oil, stirring rapidly with the whisk. As the mixture thickens, the oil can be added more rapidly.
3. Add the remaining mustard and chives. Blend well. Add lemon juice to taste.

Yield: About 1¾ cups.

SUNSHINE SANDWICH

Once considered to be limited to a summer-time treat, sunripened tomatoes from Mexico are proving that, yes, Virginia, there is a flavorful winter tomato. Many supermarkets across the country are now promoting delicious, fresh Mexican produce.

SUNSHINE SANDWICH

1 slice Whole Wheat Bread
1 large Mexican tomato
2 tblsp. Grated Cheese

Cut tomato into thick slices, arrange on bread. Top with grated cheese and broil until cheese melts. Season with salt, pepper, and basil. Serve with cottage cheese, lettuce, and tomato wedge.

SOY-MUSHROOM SAUTE

1 tbsp. all-purpose flour
3 tbsp. butter
½ ts. soy sauce (more, if desired)
2 tbsp. chopped green onions
dash MSG
salt and pepper (to taste)

Wash mushrooms; dry thoroughly. Remove tip of stem. Leave whole or slice in half if large. Sprinkle lightly with flour. Melt butter in sillet; add soy sauce. Saute mushrooms and green onions gently over low heat until tender (approx. 8 to 10 minutes), stirring occasionally. Sprinkle with MSG. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Delicious with steaks, chops, chicken or vegetables.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I've read your column for years, but this is my first letter to you. I'm glad I can put this in a letter because I could never ask anyone face to face what I need to know.

I'm 18 and can't count all the guys I've gone all the way with. Why am I such a no-good? Is something wrong with me? I was raped by my cousin when I was 11 and from then on it's been one guy after another. Some of them I didn't feel a thing for. All a guy has to do is a sweet-talk me a little and he can get anything he wants.

I'm not real cool, and I'm not stacked or anything, but guys seem to dig me because I'm friendly. I don't do drugs, and alcohol makes me sick. I'm all screwed up about sex. It doesn't mean anything special to me. It's just a way to get acquainted.

Is there any hope for me, Abby? I'd like to be respectable, but I don't have any money for a shrink. What can I do? — EASY

DEAR EASY: Call the mental health clinic nearest you. It is listed in your telephone book. Tell them Abby suggested that you go for counselling. You will not be put down or judged for your past behavior. Instead, through counselling you will learn to understand why you became so permissive and casual about sex. You will also learn how to build your self-esteem and change the course of your life. Please, please, seek their help. Then write to me again and let me know of your progress. I care.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are in our 40s. We have three children. Larry is busy with his business and I am busy with my house and the kids.

Lately Larry has been getting up at 5 a.m. He doesn't have to be at work until 8:30 and he has only a 20-minute drive to get there. Well, he rushes around getting showered, shaved and dressed and runs out of the house like he is going to be late for something. When I ask him where he is going so early, he says, "Nowhere — I just like to ride around." I am getting suspicious and would like to know where this guy goes until 8:30. Should I follow him? — MYRTLE

DEAR MYRTLE: No. Ask him what he would think if YOU did the same thing for the same reason.

DEAR ABBY: A dear friend of mine is an attractive young divorcee with three small children. Lately she's been spending her weekends out of town with her boss, who is married.

Here's the problem: She has been leaving her children at her mother's on weekends, and telling her mother that she's spending the weekend with us.

I realize this is wrong. My husband says he has covered up for her for the last time, and if I don't tell her she can no longer use us as a coverup, he will tell her.

I can't tell her, Abby. It would be like the pot calling the kettle black because I was no better than she is before I was married. What should I do? — ARIES

DEAR ARIES: Your friend "the kettle" could be brewing up an explosive mixture of evidence which could cost her custody of her children and bring much unhappiness to the family of her married boyfriend. You're not a "pot" any more, so tell her, without sitting in judgment, that you'll no longer be a party to this game.

By HARRIET HART

There are various reasons why a couple may not want to have children or increase the size of their family. It could be that there is a possibility of a hereditary disease being passed on to the children or that a pregnancy might endanger the woman's life.

The 12-page illustrated pamphlet Voluntary Sterilization states that for either sex, sterilization is virtually 100 per cent effective. It explains how tubal ligation, the female sterilization, is performed and discusses any possible complications. It also stresses that tubal ligation does not change a woman's interest in sex or sexual performance.

Furthermore, the booklet explains vasectomy, the male sterilization and how this is performed. It states that careful attention to the doctor's instructions will minimize the chance of any complications. To make sure a vasectomy has been successful, sperm tests have to be taken until sterility is confirmed.

Not All Germs Are Harmful

By L. L. Coleman, MD

I want to become a doctor. I'm in the last year of high school and I read everything I can about medicine and science. Can you explain something to me? I read that germs are everywhere on our skin and in the mouth. If this is so, why aren't we always sick? — JOAN L.

DEAR JOAN:

I do hope that eventually you will achieve your goal and become a doctor. To be one is to have a life filled with unending joys because of the contributions you will be constantly making to your patients.

It is always a special pleasure to receive letters from young readers who show so great an interest in biology and the related sciences. Even those of us who have been in practice for a long time never cease to be excited about the wonders of the human body.

The most remarkable advances made in science, space investigation, interplanetary exploration and the brilliance of computers are insignificant when compared with the wisdom of the body. And one of the great wonders lies in the answer to your question.

A healthy body is one that is in constant good balance. The rate of the heart beat, the regularity of breathing, the circulation of blood, the hormones in the blood stream are all affected by a delicate chemical balance.

That same balance exists between the germs, or bacteria, that lie on our skin or are in our mouths and the built-in protective mechanism of the body.

Not all germs are harmful. Many may even serve a good function in the manufacture of some vitamins that are so essential to good health. Other germs are known as pathogens, or disease-producing germs. Even these germs do not always affect good health when the body defenses against them are good. It is when there is a disturbance, or breakdown, of these defense mechanisms that the germs flare up, become active and cause trouble.

Joan, the more you learn about the wonders of the body the more fascinated you will be and the more determined you will be to pursue this gratifying avenue of study. Write to me from time to time and let know how you are progressing.

I have a hiatus hernia. Are there any special foods that should be avoided? — MR. A.R.

DEAR MR. R.:

Not all cases of hiatus hernia are alike. Therefore dietary regimes may vary. Generally, overeating, especially rich, spicy or fried foods, can cause some of the distressing symptoms associated with this common condition.

Physicans, therefore, urge patients with hiatus hernia to eat smaller quantities of food at more frequent intervals, rather than overloading the stomach with one single large meal. It's not a good idea to lie down directly after eating. Since this disorder occurs so frequently in people who are overweight, a sensible weight reduction program, in addition to diet, may relieve the frequency and severity of symptoms.

I just gave birth to my second child. I've been told that I have the "mask of pregnancy." Will it ever go away? — Mrs. B.L.

Dear Mrs. L.:

A brownish discoloration occasionally occurs on the cheeks of women during pregnancy. This is known as chloasma. It is thought to be caused by some temporary hormone imbalance. Almost always, this discoloration disappears.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Defence lawyer Peter Ritchie of Vancouver and Crown counsel Robert Mulligan agreed Wednesday to the committal of a 35-year-old man to higher court trial on five charges including one of attempting to murder a Saanich police sergeant.

The two-day preliminary hearing came to an abrupt end in provincial court before Judge Fred Green when Ritchie consented to the committal of Thomas Young Lackey with one Crown witness on the stand and one more scheduled to be called by Mulligan.

Lackey, also known as Gary Wallace Ross, was charged with the attempted murder of Sgt. William Hillcoat in the early morning of Nov. 8, stealing a vehicle from Mark Graff while armed with a sawed-off shotgun, possession of a dangerous weapon, use of a shotgun while committing armed robbery and discharging a firearm with intent to wound Hillcoat.

His trial date is expected to be set in county court Feb. 13.

Lackey elected trial by judge and jury when he appeared before Judge Blake Allan on Nov. 27.

★ ★ ★

Judge Harold Alder remanded to Feb. 14 two brothers who were charged following incidents the last two weekends at the Kiwanis Pavilion at Willows Beach.

John Durham Clement, 17, and Robert Murray Clement, 18, of 2950 Richmond, are charged with break-ins Jan. 20 and 28 at the pavilion and two counts of setting fire to material likely to cause fire on both dates.

Defence lawyer David Wilson requested the two-week remand.

★ ★ ★

Lawyers for three teenagers charged with the theft and possession of an $8,500 sailboat from West Bay Marina last weekend elected trial by judge without jury and waived preliminary hearings.

Barclay was denied bail Monday and Sweeney said his clients consented to remain in custody.

Alder ordered psychiatric assistance and a 10-month jail term for a 20-year-old Esquimalt man convicted of beating an eight-year-old boy with a belt Jan. 11.

Peter Bernard Laschitz, 938 Lyall, pleaded guilty Jan. 17 to assault causing bodily harm. Court was told at that time Laschitz beat the child repeatedly on the buttocks for not washing the dishes properly. The victim was not able to attend school the next morning because of the beating. Laschitz was described as a boarder at the home where the child and his mother lived.

Robert Malcolm Preston, 22, of 71 Regina, was given a 14-day jail term after pleading guilty to driving while under suspension Dec. 8.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang said Preston was stopped for speeding and produced an expired driver's licence to Colwood RCMP.

A check showed that Preston had been under suspension since Sept. 11, 1978, when he was convicted for driving under suspension and fined $100.

Preston also was fined $35 for speeding.

A 14-day jail sentence also was handed 51-year-old Denton Francis White, 970 Latman, who pleaded guilty to impaired driving.

Lang said White was stopped Jan. 6 by Sooke RCMP and subsequent breath tests produced two readings of .26. Lang also said White was convicted of the same offence July 28, 1976, when he was fined $800.

Leniency Failed So Man Jailed

A 19-year-old Saanich man, given three breaks by the courts in the past, was sentenced Wednesday by Judge Montague Drake in county court to six months in jail after pleading guilty to theft July 25 of 12 eight-track tapes and a box of fishing tackle.

Crown counsel Peter Birkett said Kelly Norman Lambert was given suspended sentences and probation for three offences in the past and three short jail terms on other matters. Two of the offences were similar to the one he pleaded guilty to Wednesday — possession of stolen property and theft.

In another case, a James Bay man who stabbed his brother Sept. 5 was given a suspended sentence by Drake, placed on probation for two years and ordered not to drink alcohol.

William Edward Donnelly had been charged with causing bodily harm with intent to wound by stabbing his brother Franklin, 30, but a county court jury found him guilty Jan. 11 of assault causing bodily harm.

Donnelly testified at his trial he had no recollection of the event and didn't recall giving police a statement that the brothers had had an argument over "two caps of junk" and that "I stabbed him."

His lawyer, David Wilson, said the brothers were both so drunk they can't remember anything. The brothers were the best of friends and the victim did not want his brother to go to jail.

Drake said it was an unusual and extraordinary case. He could not see Donnelly as a menace to society and that he appeared to be an industrious and productive person although drink is the root of the problem "which you undoubtedly have."

In a third case, Peter John Lemmen, 18, of Victoria West was convicted of robbery with violence against Jon Peter Symes outside the Empress Hotel on Nov. 25.

Glanford Site For Garden School Urged

The Royal Oak Community Association will ask Saanich council to consider acquiring land at Glanford and Vanalman as the site for the municipality's proposed horticultural school.

Association president Ben Pires said Wednesday Saanich could apply for provincial lottery funds to purchase the land or, failing that, try to negotiate a land swap with the owners.

Government leaders, doctors and health care experts from all over the world come here to study it. To find out what makes it work as well as it does. And why.

Of course there's a complicated structure of procedures and computer systems but one of the main reasons it works so well is the people. All the 663 employees listed above.

These are only some of the more than 43,000 members of the B.C. Government Employees' Union working for you all over the Province.

Under all kinds of working conditions.

All people whose skill, experience and dedication have made our provincial public employees among the most efficient anywhere in North America today. And that's something to be proud of.

The B.C. Government Employees' Union
We're working for you.

Probe into RCMP Blasted For Hiding Police Reports

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Law Union of British Columbia has criticized a royal commission on RCMP wrongdoing and the B.C. attorney-general for not providing enough information on police activities.

In a brief to be presented today to the commission headed by Mr. Justice David McDonald, the union lists questions unanswered by the commission since a union presentation a year ago.

"We ask the commission to explain how it is possible for people to recommend legislative or administrative changes if you don't tell them fully what abuses, what lines of authority and what the patterns of activity and thinking have been up to now in the security apparatus."

The union also says a report last month by Attorney-General Garde Gardom on possible illegal entries by RCMP in B.C. "raises more questions than it answers."

It says the report "gives only the barest possible facts about four cases out of 402 cases" alluded to in evidence given to the commission last April by T. S. Venner, director of RCMP criminal operations.

The union, an association of lawyers, law students and legal aid workers who espouse a socialist philosophy, got involved in Wednesday's hearing when spokesman Craig Paterson questioned the commission's ban on cameras and recording equipment.

After retiring for 1½ hours to debate the motion, Mr. Justice McDonald and commissioner David Rickerd of Toronto agreed that the commission should uphold the ban that had been applied at earlier hearings. Commissioner Guy Gilbert of Montreal dissented.

Paterson told the commissioners that it was not appropriate at a public hearing into secret police operations to "have the tape recorders of the media taken out of here by a sheriff's officer."

He argued that the royal commission is not a judicial body and should not apply rules that normally apply to court proceedings. He criticized the commissioners for "investing themselves with a judicial persona" that scares the general public away.

Last year, the law union criticized the decision to hold the hearing in a downtown office building, saying the location discouraged the public from attending.

This year's hearings were held in the provincial courthouse in the city's less affluent downtown east side, but Mr. Justice McDonald said the crowd this year was smaller than last. About 30 people attended Wednesday's session, most of them members of the media or security personnel.

The two-day public hearing here was the last of a series at which briefs submitted to the commission at least a month in advance were discussed. The commission is to make recommendations on the policies and procedures governing security agencies in Canada.

The union brief, which mainly asks questions instead of offering answers, demands information on the number of wiretaps issued in B.C. each year. It asks how many RCMP personnel operate in the province and why 402 out of 419 possible illegal entries in Canada committed by the RCMP between 1972 and 1976 occurred in B.C.

It also asks for details about alleged conflict between the provincial attorney-general's office and the commission over who is to investigate police security activities in B.C.

It also says Deputy Attorney-General Richard Vogel investigated 41 of the 402 cases of possible illegal entry and found an apparent criminal offence in all 41.

However, no prosecution was carried out — partly, Vogel's report said, because police were led by courts to believe the practice was legal and because federal, RCMP and provincial lawyers had suggested it was.

"What has happened to the lawyers or senior civil servants who gave that advice?" the brief asks. "Who were they? The attorney-general said no further action would be taken, but warned that action might be taken if this happened again.

"The commission surely understands that this history of events raises the strongest skepticism and reasonably so."

LOGGING HEARINGS URGED

Pressure for public hearings on tree farm licence renewals is being applied to the provincial government by a growing number of organizations.

Latest group to become involved in the issue is the United People Against Licence Automatic Renewal (UPALAR), which has formed in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

The group has launched a mailout campaign urging organizations and individuals to join the association in writing to the provincial government.

"Public hearings are the only forum for consideration of the effects of forest management on community stability, environmental quality, and future options in forestry. Without this forum, we feel that the licence holders of tree farms will not be accountable to the public and will have little incentive to manage the forests in the best interests of local communities or the province," states the UPALAR letter.

TFL 24, which covers the South Moresby area in the Charlottes, is the first licence up for renewal under the new Forest Act.

Forests Minister Tom Waterland has already invited Rayonier Canada (B.C.) Ltd. to renew the TFL, which is due to expire on May 1.

In other developments the Coalition for Responsible Forest Legislation has come out in criticism of the recently-released regulations for the Forest Act.

Coalition spokesman Richard Kreiger said the regulations are superficial and do not come to grips with the real problems of the forest industry.

"The bulk of the regulations deal with such trivia as campfire and Christmas tree regulations, scaling procedures, road access regulations, and slash disposal," said Krieger.

He said it ears Waterland's goal is to create a short-term, vote-inducing forestry boom.

Krieger said: "The accessible, first growth, high quality timber — which is not a renewable resource — is quickly being depleted. And with a two to eight million acre backlog of B.C. land which needs immediate reforestation, there is no doubt that this province is now set on a collision course with biological and economic realities."

Teamsters Seek Mediator

VANCOUVER (CP) - The International Brotherhood of Teamsters, representing 4,500 trucking industry workers in B.C., have applied to the federal government for appointment of a conciliation officer.

The request was made by negotiators for Locals 31 and 213 of the union after talks between the teamsters and the Transport Labor Relations Association broke off.

The employers' group negotiates for 92 trucking companies in the lower mainland area of B.C. and Vancouver Island, while another 80 firms generally accept the pattern of the master agreement. Last contract for the truckers expired Dec. 31, 1978.

REMOTE CONTROL PIMPING CHARGE FAILS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Morals charges against two city men which the Crown claimed used radio-equipped cars to dispatch prostitutes have been dismissed in County Court.

In a mid-trial ruling, Judge John Spencer dismissed charges of conspiring in 1976 to live off the avails of prostitution laid against Jack Carothers and Russel Richardson on the grounds the indictment did not cover the offence claimed.

Ruling on a motion by defence lawyer John Banks, the judge said that although there may have been as many as four separate conspiracies involving four groups of prostitutes, there was no proof of one over-all conspiracy as charged.

ICBC Probes Compensation

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia has appointed an 11-person citizens' committee to look into methods used by the corporation for compensating victims of automobile accidents.

ICBC spokesman Bob Egby said Wednesday injury awards have been rising dramatically during the last few years and the public has expressed some dissatisfaction with certain inequities in awards.

Court awards in fatal accidents from 1974 to 1976 averaged $50,000, while in 1978, in similar cases, awards as high as $600,000 were made, Egby said.

He said this poses a critical threat to future budgeting and results in higher insurance premiums.

Egby said the committee is unique to ICBC because it is the first to be composed of outsiders.

Poor Lesley's Stuck Firmly in the Past

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — The first consideration for any actress starting a new movie or TV show is her role, generally followed in order by the director, leading man and wardrobe.

As many, if not more, Academy Awards have been won by actresses in tatters as in haute couture. It pleases most feminine hearts, however, to play roles requiring many costumes by a famous designer.

She spent two years in England's distinguished Upstairs, Downstairs television series as Lady Georgina Worsley, gowned in Edwardian finery. Between episodes, Lesley toured England in Dickens' Great Expectations, another costume epic.

Lesley's new movie, The Great Train Robbery, with Sean Connery and Donald Sutherland, is set in 1855, requiring ancient threads once again.

"I've rarely been more uncomfortable in a role," said the 24-year-old brunette. "I wore all the underwear that supposedly made women gorgeous in those days.

"Each morning I put on a corset cinching my waist by three inches, then two petticoats, a skirt, blouse and jacket. You end up looking fatter than you are.

"I wore those outfits every day from seven in the morning until seven at night. There was no way to loosen anything. They were hot, heavy and difficult to work in.

"I've done many British TV period pieces, including George Bernard Shaw's Heartbreak House with John Gielgud and The One and Only Phyllis Dixey, about a stripper set in 1928."

Lesley was cast with Elizabeth Taylor in A Little Night Music, set in 1910. Last year she gained some ground on modern fashions in the movie Hanover Street, set in 1943.

But the Train Robbery turmoil "was nothing compared to what I went through playing Ophelia in Hamlet two summers ago outdoors in a ruined castle," Leley recollects. "It was the hottest summer in England in a hundred years. We performed in ungodly heat for two weeks.

"We wore full Shakespearean costumes on a black stage which absorbed the heat like an oven. The temperature of the stage was 190 degrees. It melted the rubber in our shoes.

"It was so painful the entire cast hopped from one foot to the other as we read our lines. It looked like the first disco version of Hamlet."

Mia Splitting from Andre

LONDON (AP) - Actress Mia Farrow has filed for a quickie divorce in the Dominican Republic from conductor Andre Previn, her second husband, the Daily Mirror reported today.

The mass-circulation tabloid said that the 32-year-old actress left Britain in June for the Pacific where she was making a movie and has not returned.

The paper said she took the couple's three children — eight-year-old twins Sacha and Matthew and four-year-old Fletcher — and three adopted Vietnamese children with her. Previn's whereabouts were not immediately known.

The couple married in London in September 1970, seven months after the twins were born. Miss Farrow, who achieved stardom in the television saga Peyton Place and acclaim for her role in Rosemary's Baby, was previously married to Frank Sinatra.

They married in Las Vegas in July 1966. Three years later the elfin-faced actress flew to Juarez, Mexico, for a quickie divorce, charging Sinatra with cruelty and incompatibility.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Effluent Dumping Queried

PENTICTON (CP) - Mines and Petroleum Resources Minister James Hewitt Wednesday questioned a decision made last week that would allow the City of Penticton to increase its flow of effluent into Skaha Lake.

The Pollution Control Appeal Board, a provincial agency, gave the city a permit allowing dumping of 4 million gallons daily of effluent into the Okanagan Valley lake providing treatment conditions are met.

Hewitt said the increase was contrary to government policy laid down in 1977 that effluent should be disposed of on land and not in water.

Hewitt added that he had talked Tuesday with Environment Minister Rafe Mair about the permit and Mair said the policy had not changed.

Meanwhile, leaders of the anti-pollution group, No Effluent Wanted, have asked for a meeting with cabinet on the issue.

"The cabinet must hear our appeal," said Charles Emery, chairman of the group. "We have 30 days to file an appeal and request a cabinet hearing."

New Classes of Vegetables

GARDENING

Peas, peppers, squash, kohlrabi, cantaloupe and watermelons complete the list of 34 new vegetable introductions for 1979 by one Canadian seedhouse.

Edible-pod, or sugar-pod, peas have been popular with many home gardeners since their introduction several years ago. This year we are offered a new class which may be used as an edible-pod pea or as a regular shelled pea.

It has been named sugar snap pea, an all-American winner, tall growing and needing six-foot stakes. If it is anything like the original sugar pod it will produce until frost, giving a picking of the young edible pods every three to four days.

The second pea introduction is patriot, a medium-sized, double-podded garden pea with height around 22 to 24 inches. Large four-inch pods average nine peas each, dark green, retaining both flavor and texture after freezing.

Two new introductions are martindale and tomato pimento. Martindale is classed as early, 63 days to maturity. This is a sweet bell pepper, 3½ inches square, three to four lobed. Plants are tolerant to tobacco mosaic.

Tomato pimento pepper is 10 days later, maturing in 73 days with flattened globe, tomato-shaped fruits averaging three inches in diameter with sweet flesh, juicy and thick.

An early, compact, semi-bush type squash is early butternut hybrid, another all-America winner. Bush-type squash have given good yields from a limited amount of garden space in the past, and this is also listed as high yielding, fruits uniform, medium size and good for winter storage.

Sweet mama buttercup is a cupless buttercup-type maturing in 75 days. Fruit is grey-green, drum shaped, weighing two to three pounds each with a hard shell which allows up to five months dry storage. An all-American winner, the plants are tolerant to fusarium wilt and the squash borer.

Grand duke kohlrabi is a new hybrid producing more uniform shape during adverse weather. Maturing time is 45 days, producing four-inch blue-green bulbs, this size allowing for closer placing of the seedlings. It is another all-America winner, and has good tolerance to black rot.

The list of 1979 introductions ends with a cantaloupe and a watermelon developed for northern areas and cooler summer cli[illegible]

Earlisweet cantaloupe has succeeded where cantaloupe normally cannot grow. Maturing in 68 days, each plant sets a fair number of 5½-inch round, slightly ribbed fruits with deep salmon-colored flesh and a good sweet flavor.

Panonia watermelon is said to do well in areas with a cooler summer climate and should be worth trying here on the West Coast. It is a fusarium tolerant hybrid maturing in 73 days with dark green round fruits averaging six pounds each, hard rinds and deep red flesh.

We should add a word about these hybrids. Many gardeners find them superior to kinds they have previously grown and decide to keep seed from the fruits for use the following year.

While the fruits that form are true to the hybrid type, the seed inside is produced by open pollination from nearby plants, therefore is actually another cross and the resulting plants will not be like the original hybrid. Some turn out bitter, others have flesh that is not edible.

A safe rule to follow is never to save seed from vegetables marked hybrid, or F1 hybrid.

Condescending To Old Rapped

OTTAWA (CP) — Advertisers, doctors, the media and young people were singled out for having condescending attitudes toward old people today in a submission by the Ottawa Senior Citizens Council to the Senate committee on retirement age policy.

"Advertisers are among the chief offenders," the council said.

They make old people feel guilty and ashamed because they have lines or wrinkles or skin that lacks the glow of youth, enticing "us to buy products with descriptions such as 'the line tamer.'"

Doctors give up on the elderly, advising them to expect ill health simply because they are old, filing "us away as victims of 'chronic old age' before our time."

The media should reveal what old people do with their extra years and "stop displaying us, when we reach 90 or 100, as if the mere acquisition of years was an accomplishment in itself."

"And we want our younger friends to stop saying to us, 'my, you are so young for your age,'" the council said.

These observations by the council were based on a survey of about 300 senior citizens here. The general response indicated that old people are fed up with society's view of them as human beings who have "stopped everything but breathing."

In formal recommendations to the Senate committee, the council called for a massive change in attitude toward the old and proposed that the age of retirement be flexible.

"Those who wish to retire before age 65 should be allowed to do so and those who wish to continue working after age 65 should also be allowed to do so."

And the council said home support services are badly needed by senior citizens, the majority of whom do not want to live in old folks' homes and other institutions.

Israel Okays Torture Probe

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Israeli government will allow an impartial commission to investigate allegations that it tortures Arab prisoners.

Justice Minister Shmuel Tamir said he made the offer in response to the annual report of Amnesty International, which cited press reports that Palestinians were tortured by Israeli authorities in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Pay Up, McKitka Told

VANCOUVER (CP) Ed McKitka, the colorful former mayor of Surrey, was criticized by a British Columbia Supreme Court judge Wednesday for allowing his construction company to remove sand from land he knew was owned by Surrey.

Mr. Justice D. T. Wetmore ruled that Clayton Construction Ltd. must pay $8,500 to the municipality for the sand removed.

McKitka, however, did emerge from court with a victory when the judge ordered McPhale Equipment Ltd. of Surrey to pay Clayton $13,000 for cancelling a contract with McKitka's firm to haul sand.

She'll Die of Starvation Before Giving Up Struggle

By KITTY MCKINSEY
Canadian Press

OTTAWA — A lone woman protester has vowed to die on Parliament Hill rather than give up her fight against three Quebec judges she claims are corrupt.

Lucille Dube, who has been protesting in front of the Parliament Buildings for 3½ months, went on a hunger strike this week in an attempt to convince Prime Minister Trudeau to investigate her case.

Standing on the wind-swept hill in freezing temperatures, the registered nurse from nearby Hull, Que., said she will not take any breaks from her lonely vigil and will carry her placard until she collapses.

"I will die before I will accept corruption," she said.

Every day since Oct. 16, when this session of Parliament began, Ms. Dube has timed her movements to those of the prime minister who she says is the only person who can help her.

She arrives at 9 a.m. to greet the prime minister when he drives up in his sleek silver limousine, and doesn't leave until he is gone. If he remains in the Commons or returns after the dinner break, she is there too.

She said she sees Trudeau four times a day, but he has never spoken to her. He knows that her allegations are true and is the only one who can reveal the truth and punish the wrongdoers, she said.

Now the woman who also has protested in Quebec City says she's tired of waiting for Trudeau to take action.

"I want this thing settled by the end of this week, or else," she said.

To make her point she will go without sleep, trudging along the snowy sidewalk in front of the Commons entrance and will eat nothing until she dies of starvation or exposure, she said.

"Of course I'd rather be at home," she said as she shuffled along, bundled up in ski pants, two sweaters a coat and a bulky scarf. "I'd love to go back to leading a normal life."

But, s id Ms. Dube, "It's a war between them (the judges) and me."

She wants to illustrate her contention that Trudeau and the Liberals would "let a person die to protect their corrupt judges." She claims the three Quebec judges who "wronged" her were Liberals.

Her story stretches back 10 years to the time she hired a contractor to finish the basement of her home near Ottawa.

A problem over a building permit led her to sue the contractor, but she lost the case.

As she was turned down at successively higher levels of judicial appeal, she became convinced that all the judges involved were corrupt.

She took her case first to the Quebec Legislative Assembly, protesting outside that building for two months last year. When provincial government spokesmen advised her that her allegations concerned federal justice, she moved her protest here.

Since coming to Parliament Hill, she has followed Trudeau to the nearby government conference centre when he attended federal-provincial conferences on the economy and the constitution last November.

Her lonely crusade has not gone unnoticed by the MPs who pass her every day on their way into the Commons. Before Christmas, New Democrat Arnold Peters called on Trudeau to take pity on the woman and see what he could do for her. Trudeau ignored the request.

Ms. Dube said she can understand why some people would be unsympathetic to her cause. "They have no idea what it's like to fight 10 years for justice, to spend all your money going to court, but losing because the judges are corrupt."

Afghanistan Battles Raging

PESHAWAR (AP) — An Afghan exile group says fighting has been raging for a week between Afghan government forces and 8,000 Moslem villagers who oppose the leftist government of President Noor Mohammed Taraki.

It is believed to be the largest guerrilla action near the capital of Kabul since a series of Peshawar-based rebels began their attacks on the leftist government. Peshawar is in western Pakistan about 32 kilometres east of the Afghan frontier.

Unconfirmed reports said 30 government troops were killed Jan. 26 and the government responded by sending infantry reinforcements and planes to pursue the guerrillas as they scattered into the mountains.

The Rawalpindi newspaper Nawae Waqt reported Wednesday that 160 followers of Islamic religious leader Azrat Ibrahim Majaddadi had been killed by Afghan troops. Majaddadi was being held under house arrest, the paper said.

The Jamiyat-I-Islami (Islamic Society) of Afghanistan, one of the most important of the exile groups based here, said Afghan troops were ordered last week to Tagab district in Parwan Province, north of Kabul.

The dispute was set off by the persistence of a local religious leader, Fakhrul Mashayekh Mian Gul, who allegedly burned down the regime's red flag and replacing it with his own white banner, an Islamic spokesman said.

He said reports reaching Peshawar said the Afghan air force bombarded Mian Gul's mosque and three nearby villages Jan. 27. The Islamic spokesman said the Moslem villagers counterattacked, destroyed some tanks and captured firearms and ammunition.

These battles have been raging since autumn in the eastern provinces bordering Pakistan. The rebels regard the pro-Soviet regime in Kabul as communist and anti-Islamic.

Tens of thousands of Afghan refugees have streamed into Pakistan since Taraki's forces seized the government last April. Striving to maintain correct relations with Kabul, the Pakistan government Wednesday denied reports that the dissidents had training camps in its territory.

That $500 Painting Was $10M da Vinci

AVEGNO, Switzerland (Reuter) — A Leonardo da Vinci painting bought in Los Angeles for only $500 has been sold to a Dutch museum for $10 million, the man who arranged the transaction said Wednesday.

The oil masterpiece, entitled Marriage of Poseidon and Amphitrite is believed to have been looted by a Nazi officer from a villa near Bologna, Italy, during the Second World War, then taken to Argentina by its fugitive owner after 1945.

Erich Meili, a painter and art restorer in a Swiss village near Locarno, said the painting later turned up at an antique shop in Los Angeles where a Swiss visitor bought it for $500.

Meili named the buyer as Gertrud Baertscheli, 64, a nurse from Berne, and said she had stored the painting in an attic after buying it eight years ago.

The canvas bore the master's signature but the new owner was not sure whether it was genuine and asked Meili to restore and examine the work, he said.

Professor Bruno Mueleth-aler, of the Swiss National Museum in Zurich, confirmed after ultra-violet tests that the colors and pigmentation dated from that period.

Later Professor Elf Grundemann, a West Berlin expert in 16th century Italian art, said he thought the signature was genuine, Meili said.

Triumphant Pontiff Returns To Rome

ROME (UPI) — Pope John Paul II, tanned, triumphant and smiling, today arrived home from a one-week trip to Latin America, his first foray outside Italy since being elected spiritual leader of the world's 700 million Roman Catholics.

The pope's AeroMexico DC-10 jetliner landed at Fiumicino airport south of the capital at 4:57 p.m. (7:57 a.m. PST) following an eight hour and 32 minute flight from Nassau in the Bahamas where he made a two-hour stopover.

Vietnamese Boosting Troops in Cambodia

BANGKOK (AP) — Reinforcements from two or three divisions are being moved into Cambodia from Vietnam and appear to be headed for the Phnom Penh area to try to mop up Cambodian army troops still fighting for the ousted government of Premier Pol Pot, a senior Thai source said today.

Western sources said they could not confirm the report. But they said the 100,000-man Vietnamese invasion force that rolled into Cambodia on Dec. 25 was experiencing manpower shortages, both in garrisoning captured areas and launching offensive operations against Pol Pot's Khmer Rouge army.

The Pol Pot radio in southern China, called the Voice of Democratic Kampuchea (Cambodia), said today that guerrillas were stepping up attacks inside Phnom Penh, machine-gunning or throwing grenades at Vietnamese encampments and patrols in the capital.

The radio said the guerrillas clashed with Vietnamese forces at the Phnom Penh glass factory a week ago, killed 15 of them and seized a quantity of arms and equipment.

The broadcast said that more than 90 per cent of the population of Phnom Penh now was Vietnamese and the remainder were "the running dogs of the Vietnamese," a reference to the new pro-Hanoi government proclaimed Jan. 7.

The broadcast said the Vietnamese had pillaged the city and killed those who had not been evacuated, including "thousands of patients who could not be evacuated from the hospitals in time."

After the Khmer Rouge conquered the U.S.-supported Lon Nol regime in April 1975, they were accused of killing thousands in Phnom Penh and deporting legions more to the countryside.

Darn Right, I'm Sexy, He Claims

MIAMI — A lawyer took exception when Miami Dolphins said his client didn't have enough sex appeal to be a cheerleader for the National Football League club. Glenn Welt, a 29-year-old dance instructor, has filed suit against the Dolphins for damages in excess of $10,000 for being denied a chance to try out for the all-female cheerleader squad. He offered to settle out of court for a pair of 50-yard-line season tickets, but the Dolphins declined. Welt's lawyer, Robert Stern, said his five-foot-eight client, who has a 39-inch chest and 29-inch waist, does have sex appeal "and we think the fans agree."

FRONTERA, Calif.— Leslie Van Houten, a former Charles Manson follower, has been denied parole despite good evaluations from prison psychologists and staff members. "Society has no defence in this type of crime, except to isolate the offender," Ruth Rushen, community release board chairman said Wednesday. "We feel we must observe you longer before we can project your parole date." Van Houten, 29, was sentenced to life in prison last Aug. 11 after her third trial in the stabbing deaths of Leno and Rosemary LaBianca. The LaBianca murders occurred one night after Manson followers murdered actress Sharon Tate and four others in Los Angeles in 1969. Van Houten was convicted in her first trial, but the conviction was overturned. Her second trial ended in a hung jury.

MONTREAL — Willie Obront, once described as Montreal's underworld financier, was sentenced to 20 months in jail Wednesday for defrauding Quebec tax authorities of $465,000. Obront, 55, immediately pleaded guilty to the new set of charges in Quebec Superior Court. He was freed last June after serving two years for defrauding creditors of his meat company. He was accused of failing to report income of $1.7 million to the provincial revenue department between 1967 and 1975. Mr. Justice Cyrille Morand also ordered the one-time meat magnate to pay $683,046 in back taxes and fines or face another 20 months in jail.

CALGARY — A young man who lacked the courage to ask his neighbor for a date until he got drunk and broke into her bedroom was acquitted in Alberta Supreme Court Wednesday. Lovesick Andy Arrons was too shy to ask the girl across the steet for a date, Mr. Justice Herb Laycraft was told. Fifty times he "checked her out", but 18-year-old Arrons could not bring himself to tell her how he felt. Finally, the court heard, the frustration became too much for Arrons, so he dropped by to "pop the question" — in her bedroom in the middle of the night. Arrons entered her house, burst into the bedroom and switched on the light, he told the court. He said he knelt beside the girl's bed, woke her up and begged the terrified girl for a date. But then, red-faced Arrons said, he saw the girl's fear and left the house. He was arrested the next night and charged with breaking and entering. Arrons' defence lawyer told the court there were no physical advances, and his client had said he had "no intention of committing a sexual act if the girl was not willing." Arrons said he had been to a party and "got smashed" the night of the incident.

KENNEDY

ASPEN, Colo. — Ethel Kennedy, wife of the late Senator Robert Kennedy, has been ordered to stand trial March 14 on charges she defaulted on payment of a $535 catering bill last Christmas. In setting the trial date Wednesday, Pitkin County Judge Bob Gruetter denied a motion by defence lawyer Ashley Anderson asking that Mrs. Kennedy and her housekeeper be allowed to testify in depositions to avoid appearing in court. Mrs. Kennedy was sued Jan. 2 by Le Cuisinier, a food-catering service that claimed she refused service and payment for a Christmas dinner ordered for 20 persons. Mrs. Kennedy was on holiday in Aspen with her children and Senator Ted Kennedy (Dem. Mass).

Scared Michelle Would Blow Whistle: Marvin

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lee Marvin says he kept his six-year affair with Michelle Triola Marvin going because he was afraid she might kill herself or tell the news media about his drinking habits, her abortions and other secrets.

Marvin made a dramatic exit from the witness stand Wednesday after testifying as a hostile witness for Miss Marvin, who is suing the actor for a $1-million property settlement for the years they lived together.

The actor said that after an argument in 1967, Miss Marvin confronted him with a gun and two shells and asked: "How do you load this thing?"

"I was frightened," Marvin said. "I'm telling you this was a shotgun capable of blowing someone away."

Following the episode, Marvin said he resolved to end the relationship. He rented an apartment for Miss Marvin, but she never used it because a drug overdose landed her in the hospital, he said.

Miss Marvin spent two weeks with a friend after her release from the hospital, then returned to his Malibu Beach house, he said.

Miss Marvin told a reporter later that the 1967 overdose was not a suicide attempt. She said she accidentally mixed some medicines.

Marvin's lawyer David Kagon questioned his client briefly, touching on a fight between the couple when Marvin suggested Miss Marvin should not attend the 1966 Academy Awards ceremony at which he won the Oscar for best actor in Cat Ballou.

Marvin said he asked her not to attend the telecast, because he "knew that my children would be watching and I thought it would be improper and hurtful for them to see me with her."

PAN AM NOW GOING SOLO

MONTREAL (CP) — Pan American World Airways, one of the largest airlines in the world, announced its resignation Wednesday from the International Air Transport Association, apparently in an effort to improve its competitive chances against fare-cutting charter operators.

That means, in effect, that Pan Am will participate in the setting of international safety guidelines and in legal, technical and financial aspects of the industry.

The airline will not, however, participate in IATA's machinery for setting rate and fare structures, opting instead to set its own rates for travellers.

At a meeting last year the 105 member airlines agreed to change IATA's organizational structure, allowing the association to continue to exist as a trade body without requiring airlines to participate in fare-setting as a condition of membership.

The changes were made to allow member airlines more flexibility in competing with charter operators and other non-member airlines.

The success of Sir Freddie Laker's Skytrain service on the heavily-travelled London to New York route, and charges by the U.S. government that IATA is a price-fixing cartel, sparked intense pressure to overhaul the cumbersome rate-fixing procedures.

Attacks Stepped Up by Rhodesia

By DAVID OTTAWAY
Washington Post

MAPUTO, Mozambique — In the past two months, Rhodesia has sharply escalated its war against nationalist guerrillas based in Mozambique and appears to have launched a drive to cripple the Mozambican economy and stir up opposition against the Marxist government of President Samora Machel.

Two weeks ago, Mozambican authorities issued a communique accusing the Rhodesians of now waging a "total war" against their country and seeking to spread "panic" among its people.

"They are attacking directly Mozambican economic, military and civilian installations," Mozambique's foreign minister, Joaquim Chissano, said in an interview here this week. "They are trying to destroy our republic."

Some of the attacks are being carried out by units of the Rhodesian special forces, but others are admitted to be the work of "enemy agents" belonging to a Rhodesian-backed Mozambican opposition group known as "Free Africa" which operates mainly along the border between the two countries.

These attacks have cut off coal exports from the country's biggest mine in Moatize and endangered the lives of foreign technical experts working in central and northwestern Mozambique.

A Belgian couple with the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization was killed last June. Since then five or six Portuguese technicians also have been fatally shot.

Some Swedish aid personnel are being withdrawn from the town of Tete after several nearby air attacks, and U.N. agricultural experts have been taken out of central Mozambique. Foreign aid workers who have agreed to remain here are now escorted by armed guards.

Mozambique is clearly worried by the turn of events in Rhodesia but shows no sign of lessening its support for the black nationalist guerrilla cause in Rhodesia. Nonetheless, the conference of nonaligned nations being held here this week comes as a show of Third World solidarity with Mozambique, even if it produces little financial or material support for Mozambique, the hardest-hit of the five "frontline" states that support the Rhodesian guerrillas.

The Soviet Union, which is not a member of the nonaligned movement, provides most of Mozambique's military hardware and has recently stepped up its supplies to help bolster this country's meagre defence capability.

But Mozambique still has had to increase its defence spending by more than 90 per cent this past year and now devotes 30 per cent of its total budget, about $110 million, to military and security forces.

For a country earning less than $200 million a year from its mostly agricultural exports, this a huge sum to have to commit to defence and more than the health and education budgets combined.

The extent of the damage caused by the Rhodesian attacks is difficult to measure. Government communiques and independent accounts of the situation in central and northwestern Mozambique suggest that the Rhodesians are out to wreck the already extremely fragile Mozambican economy and bring down the Machel government.

Rhodesia has set a different objective in its raids into Zambia. While they have repeatedly bombed and occupied with helicopter-born troops nationalist guerrilla camps there since last October, the Rhodesians have not sought to cripple the Zambian economy or hit civilian targets.

Rhodesia also has not tried to arouse opposition against Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda, although it has sought to provoke a rift between his government and the Zambia-based guerrilla group led by Joshua Nkomo.

Rhodesian attacks into Zambia have recently decreased even while escalating here. There is speculation this may be because Prime Minister Ian Smith hopes to hold talks in Zambia with Nkomo before the elections for black majority rule the Rhodesian multiracial government has scheduled for April 20.

Smith met secretly with Nkomo in Lusaka last August, and both said publicly afterward that they would be willing to meet again. However, Nkomo has insisted Smith must hand over power directly to the Patriotic Front, the guerrilla alliance he leads with Robert Mugabe, and give up his plan for staging elections for a government that would exlcude the front.

'She Was Still Alive' — Undertaker's Man

DETROIT (AP) — A nursing home ordered that an 86-year-old woman be taken to a funeral home at least an hour before she died, the owner of a private mortuary service says.

The doctor who signed the death certificate, however, says the man is "making a mountain out of a molehill."

Daniel Stubenrauch, 31, who transports bodies to funeral homes, said Anna Berch still had 12 vital signs of life when he arrived Jan. 18 to pick her up from the St. Clare Convalescent Centre.

Stubenrauch, a former Army medic who says he has picked up 40,000 corpses in the 14 years he has been in business, said he had been hired by the Somers Funeral Home after nurses at the nursing home reported finding "no vital signs" in Mrs. Berch between 1:30 and 2 p.m.

When he arrived at the nursing home at 6:20 p.m., however, he found vital signs and demanded that the woman be examined by a doctor, Stubenrauch said.

"This woman was still alive," Stubenrauch said in an interview. "I would stake my career and reputation on that."

Dr. Mark Diem, who signed the death certificate almost two hours after Stubenrauch arrived at the nursing home, said the woman had a condition known as crepitus — air which forms under the skin, possibly from a rupture in the lung.

"This could feel like a pulse to the uninitiated observer," Diem said "and this man (Stubenruach) is no doctor."

When Stubenrauch refused to remove Mrs. Bereh, a nurse telephoned a doctor who ordered oxygen for the woman and said he would send another doctor to the home as soon as possible.

Stubenrauch said the signs of life he had detected earlier began to vanish and that by 7:25 p.m. the woman seemed dead.

Neo-Nazi Weapons, Literature Seized By Police

HOEXTER, West Germany (AP) — Police confiscated large amounts of weapons, ammunition and explosives in raids on neo-Nazi groups in central Germany, a prosecutor said Wednesday. He said some propaganda material came from Lincoln, Neb.

Four submachine guns, several bazookas and carbines, an automatic rifle and 15 pounds of plastic explosives were discovered by police in a raid two days ago on a neo-Nazi group in this Weser River town, prosecutor Hermann Weichert said.

Amnesty Group Reports New Trends in Torture

LONDON (AP) — Disturbing new trends in repression clouded the world's human rights picture in 1978, Amnesty International said in its annual report published Wednesday.

Amnesty detailed the execution, torture or imprisonment of tens of thousands of political prisoners in most countries of the world.

The report criticized the United States for use of the death penalty, possible fabrication of criminal charges against political activists and use of cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment in some prisons.

The report said political prisoners are difficult to identify in the United States.

"The problem . . . lies in substantiating allegations that people apparently convicted of non-political offences have in fact been framed because of their political activity or ethnic origin," the report said.

Cases adopted by Amnesty in its human rights movement include peasant-farmers in South America, tribal victims in Africa, political dissenters in Eastern Europe and the former president of Alegeria, Ahmed Ben Bella, still under house arrest more than 13 years after he was ousted in a coup.

The report was "a horrifying account of how the leaders of too many nations continue to condone or instigate terrorist methods against their own citizens," said Amnesty chairman Thomas Hammarberg of Sweden.

The report said more countries in Eastern Europe are confining dissidents to mental asylums on such charges as hooliganism and parasitism while in the Soviet Union 18 of 45 monitors of the 1975 Helsinki agreement have been arrested.

In several Asian countries, rulers use so-called emergency laws to detain opponents for long periods without trial, it said.

Amnesty criticized Britain, Ireland, West Germany and Italy for "opening the door" to abuses by passing harsh anti-terrorist laws.

"Amnesty International opposes the notion that the struggle against political violence may be at the expense of the individual's human rights," the report said.

"Prisoners of consience are now being held in at least 70 countries and we are investigating other possible cases in a further 12 countries."

Atrocities on the largest scale were in Uganda, Ethiopia and Cambodia.

Amnesty welcomed the release of political prisoners in Guinea, Haiti, Indonesia, Iran, Paraguay, Rhodesia, Syria, Tanzania, Vietnam and Yugoslavia, but said many in those countries remain in custody.

12 Families Homeless In Esquimalt Inferno

At least 12 families are homeless after fire swept through an Esquimalt apartment block Wednesday night causing damage that could reach as high as $500,000.

Esquimalt firemen were still at the scene this morning mopping up and trying to determine the cause of the fire that gutted the three-storey centre block of the 35-unit Gorge Vale Garden Apartments at 1180-1182 Colville.

Crews from Dockyard and Victoria fire departments were called in to assist Esquimalt firefighters in putting out the fire which broke out in a basement locker room at about 8:40 p.m. and spread through the walls into the roof.

Dockyard firefighter Ray Nicoletti was the only casualty. He received cuts to his hand and burns to his neck and was treated at the scene.

Esquimalt police Sgt. Jack Wright said the man had apparently left the building at the first sound of the alarm but then, apparently thinking the fire was of little consequence, returned to his room to watch television.

Cedric Steele of Cedric Steele Realty Ltd., which bought the apartment only last November, said he is attempting to locate the tenants to find out if they had insurance on their belongings and to assist in making alternate housing arrangements for them.

"All I can say is I'm glad everyone got out safely," he said.

Steele said 12 suites were gutted and extensive water damage was done to a number of suites in the basement.

Esquimalt police put the loss at $300,000 but Steele said the figure could go as high as $500,000 taking into account the replacement cost of contents consumed in the blaze.

Wright said dense smoke intially hampered firemen from reaching the source of the fire. Flames quickly spread through the walls, jumped a fire guard down the centre of the building and found its way under the roof.

Ten off-duty Esquimalt policemen, who double as firemen in the municipality, were called in to suplement the five members on shift. The Dockyard sent eight firemen in two trucks and the Victoria fire department supplied a pumper truck and crew since the Esquimalt pumper is awaiting repairs.

Only this week Esquimalt council authorized spending $4,000 to repair the truck.

Troops Set On Vietnam Borders, Teng Warns

By DON OBERDORFER
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping confirmed Wednesday that China has moved troops to its border with Vietnam and suggested it might be necessary to teach the Vietnamese "some necessary lessons."

Teng's statement at a luncheon meeting with reporters, on his final day in Washington before embarking on a four-day national tour, was the strongest hint so far that China might bring its newly augmented force of 10 to 12 divisions and close to 150 warplanes in the border region into action against the Hanoi regime.

United States officials are deeply concerned about the possibility that war in Asia could spread from the Vietnam-Cambodia clash in Indochina to involve Chinese forces themselves and perhaps even the Soviet Union in retaliation. In recent days the United States repeatedly advised the Soviet Union, China and Vietnam against widening the already-dangerous Indochina conflict.

Confirming that there have been "necessary troop movements" of Chinese forces, Teng said "we will have to wait and see" what action might be taken. He emphasized that Chinese "mean what we say" and that they "do not act rashly."

He added that "it just won't do" not to teach "some necessary lessons" to such international forces as the Cubans and the Vietnamese. He called the latter "the Cubans of the Orient." He charged that Cubans are "running rampant" in Africa and that Vietnamese will do even worse in Asia unless restrained.

In addition to the hard talk against the Soviet Union and its allies, Teng's final day in Washington inluded a White House ceremony for the signing of science and technology, cultural and consular agreements, and a warm public send-off from President Carter.

"We have charted a new and irreversible course toward a firmer, more constructive and more hopeful relationship," Carter said. While saying that Washington and Peking "share many common perspectives," he was careful to add, perhaps with an eye to the Soviets, that "the security concerns of the United States do not coincide completely with those of China, nor does China share our responsibilities."

Backed by the red-starred People's Republic of China flag and the Stars and Stripes at a table beside Teng, Carter announced to some 240 guests that United States consulates will open soon in Shanghai and Canton, and that the Chinese will establish consulates in Houston and San Francisco.

Triumph for Khomeini

TEHRAN (UPI) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini returned home today in triumph and threatened to arrest army-backed Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar unless he resigns — a move Western observers said brought Iran closer to civil war.

The 78-year-old holy man announced his determination to set up a "pure" Islamic republic in place of the Bakhtiar government and appealed to the army — still loyal to Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi — to join his revolution.

Khomeini unleashed a blistering attack on the United States and pledged to drive out of Iran the foreigners he accused of plundering Iranian oil.

"I beg to God to cut the hands off all those foreign advisers and helpers in Iran," he told hundreds of thousands of supporters at Tehran's main cemetery where 1,500 victims of army shooting during 14 months of Khomeini-led insurrection are buried.

His statement was an obvious reference to the 40,000 U.S. advisers and oil workers in Iran before they began a mass exodus late in 1978. The symbolic cutting off of their hands harkened back to other Islamic republics where thieves were punished by having their hands cut off.

"Parliament and the government are illegal," he said. "If they continue we will arrest them and I will shut their mouths. I will appoint a government with the support of the people."

Khomeini has said he will name a revolutionary council — probably Saturday — to run the country and eventually establish a "pure" Islamic state.

$7.5M Grant For Welfare

The provincial government today announced a $7.5 million grant to help municipalities keep their share of welfare cost increases to a minimum.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said the additional provincial contribution will alllow municipalities to hold their share of incrrased social assistance costs to five per cent in the upcoming fiscal year.

The government made the move because welfare costs will increase more than five per cent this year although all municipalities have been ordered to limit their overall budget increases to a maximum of five per cent.

Wolfe stressed the additional $7.5 million is a one-shot grant for the 1979-80 fiscal year.

Municipalities will be assessed $1.06 monthly per capita for the next fiscal year.

However, the government projects a more realistic assessment would be $1.40. The additional funds will cover that difference.

Last year municipalities were assessed $1.01.

Wolfe blamed federal government cutbacks in unemployment insurance coverage as one of the factors in the increased costs for welfare.

By Wolfe's calculations Victoria will save $255,000 as a result of the grant.

Meanwhile, Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy has issued an appeal to B.C.'s top 150 businesses to hire welfare recipients.

Mrs. McCarthy said there are 18,000 welfare recipients under age 30 and urged: "Give those less fortunate a bit of a lift up the ladder."

She said the spending of more and more money is not going to turn the welfare cycle around.

She said she is calling on the business community to teach the less fortunate new skills, to be patient with them and perhaps to give them a better opportunity.

Asked if the government will provide incentives for business, the minister replied that might be a possibility in the future.

Mac-Blo Earnings Jump $40.2M

VANCOUVER (CP) — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., Canada's largest forest products firm, Wednesday announced highest-ever net earnings of $100.9 million, or $4.50 a share, before extraordinary items for the year ending last Dec. 31. The amount was up from $60.7 million or $2.70 a share in 1977.

Sales and other income for 1978 rose to more than $2 billion, an increase of $300 million over 1977.

Meanwhile, International Woodworkers of America spokesman Jack Munro said that because of the forest industry's healthy profit picture, the union will seek substantial across-the-board increases when its contract expires in June.

76% OPPOSE QUEBEC RIFT

Times News Services

Canadians outside Quebec are 76 per cent opposed to Quebec separation, and 67 per cent opposed to any form of sovereignty-association with an independent Quebec, a Gallup poll shows.

The poll, released Wednesday, said 19 per cent of Quebecers would vote to separate from Canada and 46 per cent favor some form of sovereignty-association.

Over-all, 59 per cent of all Canadians surveyed oppose the idea of sovereignty-association with Quebec and 27 per cent are in favor. 14 per cent had no response or were undecided.

Adults surveyed across Canada were asked earlier this month how they would vote if a national referendum on Quebec's status were held at the time of the federal election expected this year.

On the separation issue, 19 per cent of those polled in Quebec said they would support separation while 64 per cent said they would oppose it and 17 per cent did not know.

In the rest of Canada, 15 per cent said they favored separation, 76 per cent were opposed and the rest had no opinion.

Forty-six per cent of Quebecers quizzed on sovereignty-association said they would favor it, 39 per cent were opposed and 15 per cent were undecided.

Elsewhere in Canada, 20 per cent said they would vote for sovereignty-association and 67 per cent said they were opposed. Thirteen per cent were undecided.

$8M Job for Yarrows

The Victoria division of Burrard Yarrows Corporation has landed a contract for about $8 million with Dome Petroleum that will guarantee 350 jobs for a three-month period this year.

General manager Don Challinor said today the drilling ship, Dalmahoy, now in Singapore, will arrive around March 20 and work will begin immediately to make the ship suitable for work in the Arctic.

The ship will be renamed the Canmar Explorer IV.

The conversion will be similar to that carried out by the shipyard on the Havdrill in 1976.

Challinor said two shifts will be employed on the Dalmahoy during the conversion.

The vessel will be in the Arctic for the 1979 drilling season.

Challinor said the Dome Petroleum contract guarantees 350 jobs that might not have been available otherwise.

There are currently close to 500 people employed in the shipyard.

Child Credit Tax Weapon

OTTAWA (CP) — The government plans to use the child tax credit plan to collect back taxes owed by some parents.

The government has the power to withhold part or all of the tax credit from a parent who owes taxes from previous years, a tax official said Wednesday.

However, the credit cannot be withheld from a mother if it is the father who owes the taxes. The policy states that the credit can be withheld only if the person claiming the credit owes the back taxes.

The credit can be claimed by most family allowance recipients. In all but a few cases that is mothers, not fathers.

The policy was explained in an interview after Newfoundland Senator Jack Marshall said a mother in his constituency has been told she will not get her $400 child tax credit rebate because her husband owes taxes from last year.

The revenue official here said the woman should not be penalized because her husband owes the tax. She said the case would be looked into.

Meanwhile, Revenue Minister Tony Abbott said the government has assembled an army of experts to help untie some of the confusing red tape resulting from the child tax credit plan.

But he added that opposition MPs should stop bellyaching about the complicated income tax forms 1.5 million mothers will have to fill out and get out and help them do it.

Abbott, who first disputed Conservative MP James McGrath's claims that the one-page form was unduly complex, later said "I do not deny . . . that women who are faced with filling out forms for the first time may find it burdensome."

McGrath quoted from the form's instructions:

"Subtract line seven from line one to arrive at your Child Tax Credit on line eight. If line seven is greater than line one, you are not entitled to a Child Tax Credit. Transfer your credit to line 78 on page four of your return.

12 Families Homeless In Esquimalt Inferno

At least 12 families are homeless after fire swept through an Esquimalt apartment block Wednesday night causing damage that could reach as high as $500,000.

Esquimalt firemen were still at the scene this morning mopping up and trying to determine the cause of the fire that gutted the three-storey centre block of the 35-unit Gorge Vale Garden Apartments at 1180-1182 Colville.

Crews from Dockyard and Victoria fire departments were called in to assist Esquimalt firefighters in putting out the fire which broke out in a basement locker room at about 8:40 p.m. and spread through the walls into the roof.

Dockyard firefighter Ray Nicoletti was the only casualty. He received cuts to his hand and burns to his neck and was treated at the scene.

All tenants got out safely but an unidentified elderly man had to be rescued from a third-floor balcony by firemen with ladders.

Esquimalt police Sgt. Jack Wright said the man had apparently left the building at the first sound of the alarm but then, apparently thinking the fire was of little consequence, returned to his room to watch television.

Cedric Steele of Cedric Steele Realty Ltd., which bought the apartment only last November, said he is attempting to locate the tenants to find out if they had insurance on their belongings and to assist in making alternate housing arrangements for them.

"All I can say is I'm glad everyone got out safely," he said.

Steele said 12 suites were gutted and extensive water damage was done to a number of suites in the basement.

Esquimalt police put the loss at $300,000 but Steele said the figure could go as high as $500,000 taking into account the replacement cost of contents consumed in the blaze.

Wright said dense smoke intially hampered firemen from reaching the source of the fire. Flames quickly spread through the walls, jumped a fire guard down the centre of the building and found its way under the roof.

Ten off-duty Esquimalt policemen, who double as firemen in the municipality, were called in to suplement the five members on shift. The Dockyard sent eight firemen in two trucks and the Victoria fire department supplied a pumper truck and crew since the Esquimalt pumper is awaiting repairs.

Only this week Esquimalt council authorized spending $4,000 to repair the truck.

Teng Gives Vietnam Warning

By DON OBERDORFER
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping confirmed Wednesday that China has moved troops to its border with Vietnam and suggested it might be necessary to teach the Vietnamese "some necessary lessons."

Teng's statement at a luncheon meeting with reporters, on his final day in Washington before embarking on a four-day national tour, was the strongest hint so far that China might bring its newly augmented force of 10 to 12 divisions and close to 150 warplanes in the border region into action against the Hanoi regime.

United States officials are deeply concerned about the possibility that war in Asia could spread from the Vietnam-Cambodia clash in Indochina to involve Chinese forces themselves and perhaps even the Soviet Union in retaliation. In recent days the United States repeatedly advised the Soviet Union, China and Vietnam against widening the already-dangerous Indochina conflict.

Confirming that there have been "necessary troop movements" of Chinese forces, Teng said "we will have to wait and see" what action might be taken. He emphasized that Chinese "mean what we say" and that they "do not act rashly."

He added that "it just won't do" not to teach "some necessary lessons" to such international forces as the Cubans and the Vietnamese. He called the latter "the Cubans of the Orient." He charged that Cubans are "running rampant" in Africa and that Vietnamese will do even worse in Asia unless restrained.

In addition to the hard talk against the Soviet Union and its allies, Teng's final day in Washington included a White House ceremony for the signing of science and technology, cultural and consular agreements, and a warm public send-off from President Carter.

"We have charted a new and irreversible course toward a firmer, more constructive and more hopeful relationship," Carter said. While saying that Washington and Peking "share many common perspectives," he was careful to add, perhaps with an eye to the Soviets, that "the security concerns of the United States do not coincide completely with those of China, nor does China share our responsibilities."

Backed by the red-starred People's Republic of China flag and the Stars and Stripes at a table beside Teng, Carter announced to some 240 guests that United States consulates will open soon in Shanghai and Canton, and that the Chinese will establish consulates in Houston and San Francisco.

Triumph for Khomeini

TEHRAN (UPI) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini returned home today in triumph and threatened to arrest army-backed Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar unless he resigns — a move Western observers said brought Iran closer to civil war.

The 78-year-old holy man announced his determination to set up a "pure" Islamic republic in place of the Bakhtiar government and appealed to the army — still loyal to Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi — to join his revolution.

Khomeini unleashed a blistering attack on the United States and pledged to drive out of Iran the foreigners he accused of plundering Iranian oil.

"I beg to God to cut the hands off all those foreign advisers and helpers in Iran," he told hundreds of thousands of supporters at Tehran's main cemetery where 1,500 victims of army shooting during 14 months of Khomeini-led insurrection are buried.

His statement was an obvious reference to the 40,000 U.S. advisers and oil workers in Iran before they began a mass exodus late in 1978. The symbolic cutting off of their hands harkened back to other Islamic republics where thieves were punished by having their hands cut off.

"Parliament and the government are illegal," he said. "If they continue we will arrest them and I will shut their mouths. I will appoint a government with the support of the people."

Khomeini has said he will name a revolutionary council — probably Saturday — to run the country and eventually establish a "pure" Islamic state.

$7.5M Grant For Welfare

The provincial government today announced a $7.5 million grant to help municipalities keep their share of welfare cost increases to a minimum.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said the additional provincial contribution will alllow municipalities to hold their share of increased social assistance costs to five per cent in the upcoming fiscal year.

The government made the move because welfare costs will increase more than five per cent this year although all municipalities have been ordered to limit their overall budget increases to a maximum of five per cent.

Wolfe stressed the additional $7.5 million is a one-shot grant for the 1979-80 fiscal year.

Municipalities will be assessed $1.06 monthly per capita for the next fiscal year.

However, the government projects a more realistic assessment would be $1.40. The additional funds will cover that difference.
